TAKEN BY OUR SPECIAL CORRESPONDENTS.

How the Politicians Are Spending the Heated Term—The Deserted Appearance of the Fashionable Quarters—A Notable Financier—Gossip of the Stage and Clubs, Etc.

NEW YORK, July 17.—[Special.]—The politicians are out of the city. Croker is casting flies on the Motapedia; Shook is on his farm at Red hook; Grace is yachting on the sound; the wicked senator is cooling off at Long Branch; John J. O'Brien is watching the fireworks at Coney Island, and others are dashing about in the vicinity of the metropolis like swallows circulating around an old barn. Squire is the only man among them who is making a stir. To revenge himself on the mayor, he is lopping off the sinecures in the department of public works. Honest men are getting their dues, for he has already saved the taxpayers nearly $90,000 a year. One incident in the pruning is worth noticing. All the men discharged are county democrats. They are filling the air with cries of distress, and cursing Grace for bringing on the fight with Squire. The pressure for places in the custom-house caused by these wholesale removals is unprecedented The collector is bending to it, and is pitching republicans out of office so fast that the mugwump newspapers are howling, and the civil service commissioners threaten to interfere.

Meantime District Attorney Martine is resting on his oars. He evinces no intention of bringing the indicted aldermen to trial. He has locked up Waite, the informer, to keep him from the seductive influence of his former companions, and he is now talking about taking a vacation. Thus far the only alderman tried has been the one who virtually accused the district attorney himself of compounding a felony. He has gone to Sing Sing but his case has been taken to the highest appellate court, and his fellow politicians are anxiously awaiting the result. The appeal serves as an excuse for the postponement of the other trials until a time when they may have an effect on the fall elections. Jaehne was arraigned on two counts of indictment. The penalty, if found guily under the first count, was a fine and two years and six months in prison. If convicted on the second count, it was ten years confinement. The defence forced the attorney te elect under which of the courts he should be tried. Mr. Martine chose the one with a ten year punishment, and the alderman was convicted. His counsel have now gone to the court of appeals on the plea that the statute under which he was punished, applied to state officials alone, and not to members of municipal boards. All sorts of rumors are afloat as to the prospective judgment of the court of appeals. It is said that prominent officials of both political parties have sounded the judges, and that the outcome will be favorable to the imprisoned alderman. The chances seem to be about even. If the sentence of the supreme court is confirmed, the district atttorney can take his pick of the indictments against the other aldermen, and shovel them into Sing Sing one by one at his leisure. If the court of appeals overrules Judge Barrett's decision, the boys will throw up their hats, and the whole thing will go by the board. Billy Maloney will come back, Jake Sharp will refill his bottle of milk, and John Keenan will appear on Great South bay with a blue fish Squid.

Meantime I have reason to believe that the district attorney is preparing for a flank movement on the boys. I hear that he has the deadwood on them based on the Forty-second street and other cross-town surface railroad steals. The men who put up the money are said to have squealed, and the man who divided the boodle among his fellow members is said to have turned informer. A police justice and a prominent county official are to be turned up in the expose, and the whole city is to be convulsed. If this is so Martine will be the most influential man in city politics this fall.

The Deserted City.

NEW YORK, July 17.—[Special.]—A walk down the lower end of Fifth avenue from Fourteenth street to Washington square, seems like a stroll through Goldsmith's "Deserted Village." Not that other sections of the city do not show signs of summer inactivity, but at this particular location in winter there is not a night that one or other of the fine residences is not brilliantly illuminated, and superbly costumed ladies with their more soberly attired escorts flit by the half opened windows. I have seen nearly a whole block here where in front of each door an awning was spread to the sidewalk before which carriage after carriage stopped, many of the guests visiting the different houses one after the other, having received cards for all. It is not an infrequent occurrence for upper tendom to have invitations to a half dozen places on the same evening, or to pass the earlier hours at the opera and in the evening, or morning rather, at some ball or reception.

People who do not think the followers of fashion and society work may change their opinion. Mrs. Clews during the season receives one afternoon and one evening during the week, also gives one dinner party each week. She superintends the education of her two boys, keeps up the calls of at least five hundred people, attends the opera regularly, to say nothing of incidental amusements.

Mrs. James Brown Potter, on one occasion, acted in the "Russian Honeymoon" at a matinee, returned home in time to dress for a dinner party, later attened the meeting of the Nineteenth Century club, after which her dissipation was brought to a close by attendance at the Patriarchs' ball. It is the correct thing to be seen everywhere, if in "the swim."

To return to lower Fifth avenue; as I strolled along, I paused before one of the houses gayest in winter, closely barred, with boarded front entrance, and other signs that the house was untenanted. It was a plain, brick dwelling made rather conspicuous by marble trimmings which made a decided contrast to the red bricks and brown stone of adjacent residences.

This is the home of Mr. Charles F. Chickering, whose name is known the world over, where melody is appreciated. Mrs. Chickering is now a magnificent looking, middle aged woman. Years ago she was a great Boston beauty, and belonged to a rather famous family noted as rare entertainers, good story tellers, and bons vivants generally. Her name was Garafelia Oakes. An elder half-sister was also a great Boston belle, Caroline Battelle. Together these two, then celebrated sisters, were seen at all the balls and parties of the day, everywhere the center of attraction. They were so gay it was thought they would never, like the "Betty Martin" of historic fame, "find a husband to suit their minds," but they both married in the height of their success and both married Chickerings.

Caroline Battelle became the wife of Colonel Thomas E. Chickering who lost his life in our civil war, and Garafelia Oakes became Mrs. Charles F. Chickering. She is one of New York's society dowagers; her life, with one exception, has flowed on serenely. The one sorrow is a son, a charming young man, but, alas, a deaf mute. Mrs. Thomas E. Chickering has always lived in Boston. Her daughter, also a Boston beauty, is the wife of young Mr. Prince, a son of ex-Mayor F. O. Prince.

Both of the Mrs. Chickerings have homes in Newport, where just now they are entertaining many New Yorkers. "Willowbank" is the pretty name attached to one of these residences, Mrs. Thomas Chickering's, while Mrs. C. F. Chickering's is "Sunny Lee."

Young and beautiful Mrs. Stannton Whitney who has been a dashing widow in Newport for the last few seasons, is a daughter of the late Cornelius Sutton and granddaughter of Daniel S. Gregory, who, at one time, owned most of the Hudson river steamboats. Mrs. Whitney was Miss Alice Sutton and all her brothers and sisters are known for their gayety and good looks. An elder sister, Annie, now Mrs. Goodwin, was the former wife of Edward Stevens, the only son of Mrs. Ann Stevens, the celebrated authoress. Mrs. Whitney was engaged to Mr. Ely Goddard, a gentleman somewhat prominent socially in two hemispheres; both are now in Newport and the gossips are busy in noting the result. C. E. H.

Gossips of the Clubs.

NEW YORK, July 17.—[Special.]—The famous window coterie of the Union club, i. e., the occupants of the lower windows on the Fifth avenue side of the palatial clubhouse, who were once in an interview in the Herald in the never to-be-forgotten Loubat-Turnbull case designated by no less an authority than Mr. Jacob Lorillard to be a "lot of old hens," received a cable from London the other day that the white silk hat and derby had been suddenly adopted by the swells who have all along persistently sworn the conventional black hat excepting when coaching. The result has been that these aforesaid window occupants, who consist of a coterie of old bachelors, or married men, and the Jeunesse doree fast set, who think they are giving the girls a treat by displaying themselves at the window, have appeared in all the glory of light hat because "it is English, you know." As it is the English custom to keep the hat on in the club house, their window occupants religiously wear these tiles while seated at the window. That famous raconteur and practical joker, Mr. Larry Jerome, who, with Mr. William R. Travers, keeps the club alive, or rather awake, once appeared in the window minus his hat. Remonstrated with by one of the dudes because it was such "bad form," Jerome confessed that he would willingly wear his hat if he could adjust it, intimating that his head had increased in size overnight, and he could no longer keep his hat on, though he had perseveringly tried to adjust it with a shoe horn. Jerome, in telling the story, declares that his young friend volunteered to loan him his own polished silk, but that the attempt to get it on simply wrecked it, much to the other's discomfiture.

Since Mr. Travers's absence in an effort to recover his health, and Mr. Jerome's partiality for the company and cuisine of the Carlton, the Union has become a very gloomy place, and in default of a scandal this innovation of the window occupants will once more attract attention to the club. During the summer the spacious reading room on the main floor will be redecorated and renovated.

It is said that Erastus Wiman, who is a bustling go-ahead man, a native of Kingston, Canada, but a thorough yankee, seems to regard the Canadian club as his private property, which, since he makes things very pleasant, is not particularly objectionable to the rank and file. If Wiman is made a Sir, as some of his Canadian friends think he ought to be for his commercial activity in the old dominion, the club, in in its felicity in having two titles on its roll—Sir Roderick W. Cameron is also a member—will probably want to fly the old country flag.

The proposition of Mr. Cornelius Vanderbilt to erect a club house for the employes of the New York Central and Hudson river railroad on one of the vacant lots near the Grand Central depot is taking shape. It is understood that the rules which govern Mr. Vanderbilt's Sunday-school will be engrafted into those of the club, and that it will consequently be a model institution of its kind.

If Colonel Clark and the veteran corps do not amicably settle their differences regarding the latter's occupancy of a room in the Seventh regiment armory, it is said the old boys will build a club house which will be a symposium after their own heart. It only remains to be added that the veteran corps is composed of a festive class who generally take possession wherever they go and glory in being called "old boys"—the accent on the boy.

The Manhattan club proposes to purchase authentic portraits of deceased leaders of the party, and has secured a Jackson painted from life. A new Jefferson may soon be added to the collection. Excepting the Union league, the Century and the Lotus, and, it may be added, the Lambs, none of the clubs have anything to boast of in the way of paintings and pictures, there being none at all in many of them, though the collections in the three first named are really very attractive and valuable. In the Lotos, for instance, there is a painting of a storm in a forest thicket by Jefferson, the comedian, and a three-quarter life size portrait of Whitelaw Reid by the eminent English artist, Hubert Herkomer, which, if the subject perseveres in his sensational aspirations, will probably be reproduced in all the illustrated papers.

The University club feels rich enough with its enlarged membership to stop renting its little theater, and will next season use it for its own exhibitions and entertainments, proposing the innovation of a series of soirees dansantes which will doubtless prove very attractive to the ladies. The dudish element is largely represented in the University, but the genus is Americanised. The English dude blossoms in the windows of the Knickerbocker, but the genuine slim dude, with the smoke-stack collar, the toothpick polished gaiter, is to be found at the Calumet. There are no dudes to be found in the other clubs, but, to use the expression, "toughs."

JOHN D'ARMIE.

A Notable Financier.

NEW YORK, July 17.—[Special.]—One of the notable figures that I see hurrying through that human sea, Broadway, is a man slightly under the medium height in a gray business suit with jacqueminot rose in his buttonhole and an intent, earnest, yet good natured expression on his English-looking features. In his mutton-chop whiskers he looks like a Londoner, but his activity is that of a born American. It is Erastus Wiman. He is one of the numerous foreigners who have won wealth and distinction in this country. Alexander Hamilton in statesmanship, Albert Gallatin in finance, A. T. Stewart in trade, Farragut in war, and now comes a man from Canada whose name is already well known in the United States as a financier and the organizer of various business projects. He was born in 1834 in a little village near Toronto. In the summer months he worked in the field for fifty cents a week; in the winter he picked up a scanty school education. His best education was in a printing office in Toronto, where he obtained emplyment as a boy of fifteen. He remained there until he was nineteen, acting first as a roller boy for an old style Adams press and finally as a type setter. His wages ranged from $1.25 to $5 a week.

"The proudest day of Erastus Wiman's life," said one who knows him well, "was the day that he threw into his widowed mother's lap the sum of $1.25, his first week's wages. Throughout his whole apprenticeship the same disposition was made of every dollar he earned, for they were very poor. He had a younger sister but no brother to share the burden with him. He has told me with glistening eyes how when he had achieved the great earning power of $5 a week, he and his sister walked the streets of Toronto looking into all the milliners' windows to select a bonnet for the dear mother that she might go to church on the following Sunday, and with what pride the adornment was selected and presented. Long before he himself owned a house the good mother and sister were comfortably settled in a home of their own, and years before he himself could afford a carriage, one had been provided for his mother, who, in her advanced years, had become lame and unable to walk. With such a principle of self-sacrifice and such industry as he early manifested, success was only a question of time."

Leaving the printing office he joined the staff of the Toronto Globe as a commercial writer and compiler of statistics. These duties brought him in contact with a large number of business men. In time his acquaintance extended to all the leading merchants and bankers of Canada. When R. G. Dun & Co. extended the operations of their mercantile agency to Canada, young Wiman was employed as one of their trusted assistants. In a few years he became the Canadian head of the business. In 1865 he came to New York as one of the leading members of the firm now known as Dun, Barlow & Co., in New York, and Dun, Wiman & Co., in Canada. His experience in the metropolis has been as interesting as his success has been marked. He is always ready to help the needy and his sympathies are especially warm towards Canadians. He is president of the Canadian club of this city; in his fine home at New Brighton, Staten Island, are numerous specimens of Canadian art; he has spent considerable sums in encouraging Canada's national game of lacrosse; he has used all his influence and adroitness in promoting the success of the winter carnivals in Montreal, whither some fifteen or twenty thousand Americans have been induced to go and spend, as the Canadians compute, not less than half a million dollars in a season. He has done much to establish a Canadian colony in the United States by giving employment to Canadians in his agency business all over the country. He has, I am told, 106 branch offices, and fifty of these have Canadian managers who in turn have looked after their fellow countrymen. Erastus Wiman is the head and front of the firm known as Dun, Barlow & Co. Under his administration its revenues have increased to two millions of dollars annually. He prints a book four times a year containing, I believe, a million names and requiring forty tons of type to print it. He is a director in the Western Union telegraph company and pays nothing for his telegrams.

Mr. Wiman has in recent years given much attention to the enlargement of the harbor of New York and to the development of Staten Island. He is president of the Staten Island railroad, and controls the ferry company which acts in conjunction with it. A few years ago Staten Island was little known to New Yorkers. The trips by the ferry were few, and the means of transportation on the island primitive. Now the ferry boats make thirty-eight trips a day, and even the remoter parts of the island are about as accessible as Harlem. Mr. Wiman, I expect, would like to see the city of New York, or at least the kernal thereof, transferred to Staten island, but energetic and persistent as he is he will never see this miracle accomplished. The people of New York, as it is now known, like Staten island well enough as a summer resort, but they will not emigrate to it as a business body. Mr. Wiman may as well try to move some other mountain. As to his efforts towards an enlargement of the New York harbor, they have met with the hearty approval of all who understand the supreme importance of the subject. Congress has devoted millions to the goose runs of the country, but nothing of importance has been done in recent years to enlarge the principal harbor of this continent.

Mr. Wiman's railroad and other projects have brought him into a conflict with the state of New Jersey and the Pennsylvania railroad in some respects remarkable. He is at once aggressive and shrewd. An alliance with the Baltimore and Ohio railroad for the entrance of that road into New York is one of the chief events of Mr. Wiman's life. The printer's boy at $1.50 a week had become a railroad magnate. The alliance is of such a nature that it is peculiarly to Mr. Wiman's advantage to build up Staten Island and attract visitors thither. This is the secret of Saint George and its sky rockets, its blare of bands, its Buffalo Bill shows, electrical fountains and baseball matches. The financier has something of Mr. Baskam's skill in leading the public by the nose.

All this fortune of two or three millions, all his financial achievements pale before one single act of his bustling and eventful life. Ffty years hence nobody will care how much he was worth, but history may well record, with an electric spark playing around the words, that the repeal of the ancient and barbarous statute in regard to imprisonment for debt was largely due to the efforts of one man, Erastus Wiman. An emperor might have been proud to listen to the words of heartfelt, tearful gratitude that were poured out upon this business man of New York by the unfortunate men suddenly and unexpectedly released from hopeless imprisonment, who assembled in front of Ludlow street jail to thank their benefactor, who, out of a pure kindness of heart, had spared neither time nor money in their behalf. It was an act that may well have caused the miserable place and the bystanders to shine.

Like most men of large enterprises, Mr. Wiman is careful in his personal habits. He neither drinks nor smokes. He is fond of horses, and has six good roadsters. He has a farm which he loves for the needed rest and seclusion which it affords. He works early and late, and employs several stenographers. In manners, he is genial and unpretending; in disposition, he is a great, good-natured boy; in commercial skill, in financial acumen, he is unquestionably one of the notable figures of the times. His name, I hear, is to be presented to Queen Victoria for knighthood. It is not impossible that his Canadian friends will yet greet him as Sir Erastus Wiman.

OSCAR WILLOUGHBY BIGGS.

Railroads in the Market.

NEW YORK, July 17.—[Special.]—The stock market seems to be absolutely under the control of Chicago speculators. They not only affect it by their manufactured reports in regard to the prospect of the crops, but also by the actual buying and selling of an immense amount of a certain class of securities. They don't seem disposed to touch the trunk lines and the southern and southwestern railroads, but they seem to have an absolute control of the Grangers and Western Union, and that is sufficient for them to be able to manipulate the market at their own sweet will. As far as New York is concerned, it has been clearly demonstrated within the last ten days that with the exception of Victor Newcomb and the Standard Oil people, there was no large operator in the market. Newcomb, however, has of late become a power sufficiently strong to affect the market even without the assistance of his Standard Oil friends, and he has been so successful for the last year or two that, his shy and retiring disposition notwithstanding, he had accumulated a very large following.

It is difficult to express any opinion in regard to the immediate future of the stock market, but if the crops are not as badly damaged as has been reported, and if European complications, which are beginning to be seriously talked about, become more pronounced, we are likely to have a very strong and advancing market both for stocks and bonds. At the slightest indication of danger to peace, the European capitalist, big as well as small, will put all his spare cash in that class of securities which are likely to be the least affected by complications at home, and among which securities the American railroad bonds and shares will occupy a front seat.

As far as the week's market is concerned, there is nothing particular to record, except the weakness of the coal stocks and the slow sagging of Western Union, which was so foolishly hoisted under the cover of the Fourth of July festivities.

There was renewed activity in St. Louis and San Francisco stock during the week consequent upon the process of consolidation with the Atchison, Topeka and Santa Fe road, recently referred to in this column. The expenses of this road are at a ratio as low as those of almost any railroad in the country, and in order to still further reduce them the company has under consideration a proposition to exchange its traffic agreement with the Atlantic and Pacific road for a joint guarantee of the principal and interest of Atlantic and Pacific bonds at four per cent by the St. Louis and San Francisco and Atchison roads. If the extensions and improvements projected by the San Francisco company come up to the expectations of the present management, the preferred and even the common stock will undoubtedly be classed among the dividend payers within a year after the opening of the new lines.

The first through train on the Canadian Pacific reached Port Moody on the 4th inst, having made the distance of 2,895 miles at an average speed of twenty-one and one-half miles an hour. It is the design of the road not only to run trains faster than this, but to furnish special accommodations and inducements to commercial travelers, in order to build up the trade along the line. One project is to run a train regularly for their convenience, stopping at every station along the route, and fit it up to accommodate samples of all the commodities dealt in. The opening of the Canadian Pacific suggests a wide field for speculation. It is not at all improbable that a line of steamships will be started between Port Moody and Hong Kong, which the repeal of the Chinese restriction act would make pay enormous profits. This would doubtless be approved of by the greater portion of the loyal residents of the Canadian dominion, who would much prefer the Chinese immigrants to the lazy Irish now employed as laborers. San Francisco needs to look out for her laurels.

The National Consumers meat company has at last opened three stores in New York, in furtherance of its long projected scheme of supplying meat direct to the consumer from the ranch. These stores have been successful from the first, for not only are the prices charged therein some 20 per cent lower than are generally charged by retailers, but the meat sold is good. This plan of killing beef on the ranches and shipping east by refrigerator cars met with a great deal of opposition when it was first broached, principally from those interested in the stock yards, and from the officials of the railroads engaged in carrying cattle. All this opposition being overcome, however, the laboring man of this city finds it in his power to eat the best meat for 20 per cent less than what he could get of a poorer quality before.

Gossip of the Stage.

NEW YORK, July 17.—[Special.]—On Saturday Margaret Mather starts for California to conquer the Pacific slope. It is a curious fact that during the five years of this actress's engagement to Mr. J. M. Hill she has never spoken to a living soul off the stage except her manager. Nobody during that time has been able to get admitted to her rooms, much less interview her. She has never been seen in public except when playing, and not an authenticated line has appeared in print as coming from her lips.

This is very remarkable when it is considered that Miss Mather is one of the most conspicuous, best advertised and widest known of our actresses. The fact that she has had nothing to say stands out in such awful contrast to all the unmuzzled celebrities and beauties that one cannot help wondering at it. That Mr. J. M. Hill hermetically seals her after each performance is said by the people in the Union Square hotel to have no foundation in fact, for they have heard her reciting in her room. The private veil of mystery which falls promptly with the fall of the curtain and shuts Mather off from the public, is, I suppose, a managerial policy, built upon the consideration that Mather has nothing to say. But it has given rise to all sorts of expedients on the part of press men to make Mather talk.

One enterprising Bohemian tried to get admittance as a maid and another as a priest. But Mr. J. M. Hill always turned up with a quiet thing in neckties with an adage on it of "too thin."

Now there is a very pretty story about a lover of long ago who was loved in return, and who was left out in the cold when Mr. J. M. H. took charge of the actress.

Her contract read: "No interviews, no female dressmakers, no lovers," and she had to bid everlasting farewell to her love of long ago. But one day he threw a boquet at her and in it was a card which read: "Learn the deaf and dumb language, darling. Yours till death, mutely. Alphonse."

Her soul bade her obey. She learned it. So did he. And about the time that she came to the Union Square to play Juliet they had got so they could converse in it across the footlights.

If faith can remove mountains, it was plain that love could remove a Hill. How few who then wondered at and admired the gestures of Mather, knew that she was conversing with Alphonse in the left hand box.

It was in the potion scene especially that they used to have a sociable little chat every night, for that scene of agony gave her every excuse to use her hands, and Mr. Steele Mackaye remarked emphatically one night, after studying the play of her fingers, that she had in some way acquired the psychic interpretation through the digital flexus. But I always doubted the flexus.

Some of the communings in this way were deeply interesting to the favored few who happened to be deaf as well as dumb, and who got the text from her fingers and not from her mouth. I shall never forget a young lady friend of mine who was a deaf mute and who went from the theater to her Shakspeare to find Mather's lines. "What lines are you looking for, my dear," I asked her with a pencil.

"Why," she replied with a pen, "the line, 'How are all the boys?'"

"Nonsense," I said, "that isn't in Shakspeare."

"Isn't it? Well, I'm sure Miss Mather said it. Then, too, she said, 'Do you remember all the toots we had in the sweet yesternight?' I can't find it in the play."

"Oh, you must be dreaming."

"No, I'm not. I cannot understand her action at all. In the potion scene she said: 'Cheese it, his Nibs is in a back seat.' They must use a version of the text that we are not familiar with. Don't you think so?"

"Yes," I replied, "she does, but you must admire her handling of it."

Lucky Alphonse, to thus have his trysts embalmed on the Shakspearean amber, and the candle of love hidden sweetly from the world, even when it was set upon a Hill.

NYM CRINKLE.

Sporting Gossip.

The sensation of the week in sporting circles was the raid made upon Phil Daly's "Pennsylvania Club," at Long Branch. It is unquestionably the best appointed and squarest gambling house on this continent. There is no free lunch or free drinking going on there. The restaurant, as well as the bar, is conducted on the regular club principles, which means the best obtainable article is supplied at a rate which leaves just margin enough to cover the expenses of the kitchen and the pantry. Nobody was enticed to gamble there, and Daly took good care never to allow any one to play whom he did not know as being a man of sufficient means to allow himself a little gambling luxury. None of the villagers of Long Branch were ever allowed to put a dollar on any game. The club was established for well-to-do New York and Philadelphia people who spend the summer season at Long Branch. To mention the names of any of the visitors at the club would be to give almost the whole list of the leading New York and Philadelphia stock brokers and bankers residing at Long Branch. Whoever initiated this anti-gambling movement could certainly have not meant to do any good to Long Branch, for the club was the only resort where rich men could go to spend an hour or so after their wives and children retired at the close of the hop or the concert. The stopping of betting on races has killed Jerome park; the restrictions put on it at Sheepshead bay and Monmouth park are affecting these two institutions, and the interference with the gambling proclivities of the summer residents of Long Branch is sure to seriously affect the prosperity of this popular watering place.

RIGOLO.

LITERARY PIRATES.

Something of the Cheap Library's Published in New York.

NEW YORK, July 17.—[Special.]—The literary pirates of this city have so savagely cut one another's throats that the loss of blood seems likely to kill most of them. Alarming weakness is exhibited in several instances. Each concern has been eager to slash into its competitors, and has done so in a manner to inflict self-injury. Every foreign novel, no matter whether there was a reasonable chance or not that it would have any sale, has been grabbed at the earliest possible moment by three to six of the "library" publishing firms, and hastily thrown upon the overstocked market, on terms that allowed the retailers to return unsold copies. So complete have the mechanical resources of the pirates become that in three establishments the entire work, including typesetting, printing and binding, is done by machines. The stolen matter can be rushed through the great mills in ten hours when driven at the quickest. The celerity of the process has tempted the publishers to a vast over-production. A member of one firm declares that not more than one book in twenty in the cheap libraries repays the cost of issue; and that, even with the most popular novelists' stories, duplicate piracy divides the profit into small portions. Heavy capital is required, because all the stock in the hands of the retailers throughout the country is owned by the publishers during the six months that it is left on sale. Within a month the returns of copies have been enormously increased. While the aggregate sales have lessened, the stock issued has been multiplied through hot rivalry. Ineffectual efforts have been made to bring about a compact under which the foreign novels should be apportioned among the libraries, in the way that the regular publishers used to do, but nothing has come of it. Now rumors are afloat of insolvencies and impending bankruptcies.

A RUSSIAN LETTER

FROM UNITED STATES CONSUL-GNRAL P. M. B. YOUNG.

A Very Interesting Letter from St. Petersburg, in Which Many Topics of General Interest are Touched—How the Trip to Russia is Made Something About the People, Etc.

The following letter, written by General P. M. B. Young, United States consul general to Russia, to three friends in Atlanta, is full of general information and otherwise so graphic and interesting that it will be read with much interest by the many friends of the gallant Georgian. The letter in full is as follows:

ST. PETERSBURG, June 16, 1886.—Don't you think it about time you were getting ready to start on that trip to Russia that you promised you would make this summer? About the 1st of July or middle of August would be a good time to start from Atlanta. Not that I believe that you will really come, but I am just going to show you how easy it is and how pleasant it would be for you and a party. Leaving out the expression of the transcendent pleasure it would give me to welcome a party from Atlanta. Now, if there was a political convention, or a church conference, or a commercial or railroad convention proposed for all nations to meet in St. Petersburg in August, I should long since have received numerous letters, directing me to prepare quarters for the Georgia delegation and I would also have been informed that Georgia would expect the chairmanship of the committee on resolutions, the committee on credentials and all the other committees. The delegation certainly would be full and a lively time would be had over the distribution of the honors, and no abler delegation in any international convention would be found than that from our grand old commonwealth, but there is no convention, and as I fear the conventions at home will detain you, I am writing to urge you to come anyhow, though you have to neglect them. You might leave home on 1st July or August, and be in St. Petersburg in thirteen days, after a most delightful trip. From here you could go to Moscow, Helsingfors, the capital of Finland, Stockholm, in Sweeden, and Christiana, in Norway, thence by way of Warsaw and Vienna back to Antwerp or Liverpool or Bremen and take ship for New York, and be back in your office in Atlanta in two months and fifteen days, after one of the most instructive and delightful trips in the world and all for the sum of about $350 each, which is a liberal allowance for the trip, and this includes everything first class, eating, traveling and everything; you can do it in less time, but this gives time to see everything and a few days to rest in each place. The cities you would pass through are Antwerp, Cologne, Berlin, Konigsberg, St. Petersburg, Cronstadt, Warsaw, Moscow, Helsingfors, Stockholm, Christiana, Copenhagen, Vienna and Paris if you wish. Where can you spend such an amount of money to better advantage for the summer and get half as much for it?

LIGHT ALL NIGHT.

All of this northern country is now delightful. The nights are indescribably splendid, for in fact there is no night. I read a newspaper this morning at two o'clock without any artificial light. It is quite daylight till twelve o'clock and then at one o'clock it is quite light again. In another month it will be daylight all night, and when you take your trip to Stockholm you will see the midnight sun.

If you should come with as many as six persons in a party the expenses for the trip I have mapped out will be less than $300 each. Come on, and I will be your guide from Petersburg on until you embark for home. I intend to come over in September myself. I would recommend the Red Star line of steamers that sail from New York every week, and often twice a week. They are all new steamers, very large, strong, safe ships, built in England, of iron, and owned largely by American capital, splendidly commanded, excellent discipline, fine table, electric light, electric bells and every comfort enjoyed by any ships in the world. I never saw better discipline or more luxury and comfort in traveling. I think you would be as safe in one of these ships as in your office in Atlanta, and much safer.

THE CONSTITUTION IN RUSSIA.

Well, I am far away, and my heart only full of everything that contributes to the happiness, the honor and glory of my blessed state and I [illegible] a servant or in any capacity he pleases, so long as he can be present on certain days at his regiment headquarters. It is the most self-sustaining army in the world. They are capable of more hard work and fatigue, and live on cheaper diet than any set of civilized men in the world. There are in all about two millions of men in the military service of Russia, in all branches. I am now preparing a report on the military organizations of Russia, which I hope will interest you when it is finished.

IMPOSING EASTER CELEBRATION.

Easter week just passed is a great week in Russia. On Thursday of Easter I visited the great ceremony of the washing of the feet of the twelve disciples, which in the Greek church, the established church of Russia, is a very impressive ceremony. This was performed in the great Isaac's church here, which is one of the most magnificent churches in the world. It has cost more than five million dollars in construction and is very extensive in all its appointments. There were about twenty priests engaged in the ceremony. A large platform was erected in the church about one hundred feet in front of the altar. This platform was about thirty feet long and twenty wide with many ornaments about it. After a long ceremony of prayers, masses, chants, etc., the metropolite bishop in his gorgeous golden robes, attended by two other priests with massive candles, moved out from the altar and ascended the platform, then faced the altar, seated in a chair resembling a throne. Then the priests representing the disciples came out from the altar in couples, with pages walking behind them supporting their robes. The couples came out at intervals of half a minute; as each couple reached the top of the platform, they bowed low to the bishop on the throne, then separated, one to the right and one to the left, taking seats facing each other. After the twelve seats had been filled a mass was said and a chant by the choir. Then came two priests, one bearing a large golden vessel which would probably hold several gallons. The other bore golden pitchers filled with water, and these vessels were placed on a table in the center of the platform. The metropolite bishop or chief bishop rose, advanced to the table and taking one of the pitchers poured some water into the golden vase. He wrapped a long white sash or towel around his person and lifting the vessel, carried and placed it at the feet of the first priest on the right and knelt and washed the right foot of this priest, he wiped it with the sash and then taking up the vase he arose and the priest who had been washed arose and kissed his hand and cheek. This ceremony was repeated with each one of the priests till the feet of the twelve had been washed. Then another mass and chant and all returned in solemn procession to the altar, another prayer and chant and the ceremony was ended. There are no female voices in the choirs of the Russian church and no organs or instruments of music. The choirs are composed of men and boys and their voices are trained to perfection, and their choruses are grand and beautiful. Females do not respond during the services nor are they allowed behind the altar in the Russian churches.

A WEEK OF GENERAL KISSING.

It is the custom here with all the people of the Russian church when meeting each other on the day of Easter Sunday or at any time during the week. One exclaims, "Christ has arisen," and the other responds, yes, "He has surely arisen," and they kiss each other. This custom is observed by the high and the low, even the emperor kisses the first person he meets on coming out of his rooms in the palace. It is related that one year ago when the emperor came out of his room, the first person he saw was the sentinel at his door and he immediately approached the sentinel and said, "Christ has arisen." The soldier did not respond, but was silent and on inquiry the czar found that his sentinel happened to be a Jew. Ever since that time Jews are not found on guard in the palace. To say the least of it, the Jew was honest.

AN INTEMPERATE PEOPLE.

I am sorry to say during this week there are no evidence of temperance laws in Russia, for there is much intoxication, but the fellows under the influence of liquor are very quiet, and never appeared to be imbued with pugilistic proclivities. If half as much vodka had been consumed in any American city as was consumed in Peters-burg Easter week, there would have [illegible] a broken skull and [illegible]

GOSSIP OF THE DAY FROM WASHINGTON.

Probability That August Will See Congress Still in Session—A Lively Tilt Between Senators Edmunds and Logan—The Oleomargarine Bill—And Other Items.

WASHINGTON, July 17.—[Special.]—The business of congress is now in a condition which renders the time of adjournment very uncertain. Nearly all the necessary work has been done well, and everything depends upon the two houses. Mr. Randall said today that congress could adjourn within three days if it chose to do so. The danger of delay lies in the numerous conference committees, which will consider the differences of the house and senate on the various appropriation bills. The general opinion is that the session will be protracted to the first of August.

The senate committee on commerce has presented the singular spectacle of having labored ten days to perfect a river and harbor bill, and then presenting and passing a motion to scale its appropriations twenty-five per cent. The effect of this motion will be to leave the Georgia appropriations as follows:

Harbors — Brunswick, $22,500; Cumberland sound, $112,500; Savannah, $150,000.

Rivers—Altamaha river, $15,000; Chattahoochee, $150,000; Coosa, $45,000; Flint, $15,000; Ocmulgee, $5,625; Oconee, $5,625; Romney marsh, $17,425 Savannah river, below Augusta, $11,250.

EDMUNDS AND LOGAN DISAGREE.

Last night Senators Edmunds and Logan, two presidential candidates, exchanged opinions of each other in the senate, and their comments were anything but complimentary. Mr. Logan wanted to increase the appropriations for several Illinois improvements after the horizontal reduction had been agreed upon and Mr. Edmunds opposed it as unfair to other sections. Mr. Logan, with some warmth, retorted that Mr. Edmunds, whom he sarcastically called the "assistant chairman" of the committee, had got for Vermont more than her share, and was fighting everything Burlington asked for. Continuing in his sarcastic strain, he said Burlington, Vermont, was a much larger and more important place than Chicago. Mr. Edmunds, with more seriousness, replied that as the Illinois senator never told an untruth, Burlington must be larger and more important than Chicago. He spoke of Logan as carrying a chip on each shoulder, and added that they have social order and the execution of law in Burlington, which do not exist in Chicago. This slur upon Chicago stirred Mr. Logan's ire. He replied that the people of Chicago are just as good as the senator from Vermont, just as law abiding, and "certainly they are not so pestiferous at home as he is in this body." [Laughter.]

THE MORRISON RESOLUTION.

Senator Warner Miller said today that the finance committee of the senate would hardly report the Morrison resolution to restrict the treasury surplus to $100,000,000 at this session. He said the resolution would necessitate a debate which would prolong the session considerably. Senator Beck and some other democrats will urge the consideration of the resolution at this session.

GENERAL SHELLEY'S NOMINATION.

The rejection of Solicitor General Goode has given fresh vigor to the war on General Shelley, of Alabama, whose nomination as fourth auditor of the treasury is still held up in the senate. Mahone is opposing Mr. Shelley, and is trying to get the republicans united against him. The arrogance of the little "boss" is becoming distasteful to many of the republican senators, who think he has been sufficiently paid for his vote in 1881, and recognize that he has played out in Virginia. They do not need his vote now to keep control of the senate and are disposed to disregard his self-importance. General Shelley will be confirmed.

THE OLEOMARGARINE BILL.

All the test votes today show that the oleomargarine bill will pass in the senate. It is asserted that the president will veto it, but this is pure guess work.

Pennsylvania democratic congressmen are satisfied that ex-Senator Wallace will accept the nomination for governor. They say that Mr. Randall will disregard all past differences between Mr. Wallace and himself, and give him his hearty support. Governor Curtin's friends are disposed to press him for the nomination, and he is pleased at their enthusiastic support, but the impression here is that Wallace can lead the campaign against Beaver if he wants to.

PERSONAL MENTION.

Marshal Wade, of the southern district of Georgia, is here. The object of his visit is to get the approval of Judge Speer, who is in Washington, to his accounts for July. The term of District Attorney Darnell expired today. Mr. Dupont Guerry, of Americus, will probably be appointed to succeed him in a few days.

F. H. R.

THE OLEOMARGARINE BILL.

The Senate Takes Up the Bill and Discusses It.

WASHINGTON, July 17.—In the senate, Mr. Dawes, from the committee on Indian affairs, submitted a report on the message of the president vetoing the bill granting right of way through reservations in northern Montana, recommending the passage of the bill, notwithstanding the president's objections. He stated that the report was unanimous and that he would take an early occasion to call it up for action. He did not think that it would take much time in debate.

Mr. Miller called up the oleomargarine bill, the house bill defining butter and regulating the manufacture, sale importation and exportation of oleomargarine (reported by the committee on agriculture without amendment.

The bill was read in full.

The question whether the bill should be now considered was decided in the affirmative —yeas 28, nay 13, as follows:

Yeas—Messrs. Allison, Blair, Cockrell, Conger, Cullom, Dawes, Edmunds, Evarts, Frye, Gorman, Hale, Harrison, Hawly, Hoar, Kenna, Logan, McMillan, Mahone, Miller, Payne, Platt, Plumb, Sherman Spooner, Stanford, Teller, Van Wyck and Wilson of Iowa—28.

Nays—Messrs. Beck, Berry, Brown, Coke, Gray, Harris, Jones of Arkansas, Maxey, Pugh, Vance, Walthall, Whitthorne and Wilson of Maryland—13.

Mr. Beck moved to refer the bill to the committee on finance. It was, he said, a tax bill, beyond all controversy and as such should, under the rules of the senate, be considered by the committee on finance. It not only dealt with internal taxation, but it changed the tariff laws. There was no report from the committee on agriculture, but the magnitude of the bill was set forth in the report by its friends in the other house. In this report it was stated that about 200,000,000 pounds spurious and imitation compounds were manufactured annually. This amount, if taxed as proposed, would produce a revenue of ten million or (if the quantity imported was large) possibly fifteen million.

Mr. Miller opposed the motion to refer saying that the only possible result of such a reference would be to bury the bill and carry it over for this session.

Mr. Maxey advocated the motion to refer, on the ground that it was a tax bill, and, therefore, the committee on agriculture had nothing to do with it.

The motion to refer bill to the committee on finance was defeated—yeas 15, nays 29.

Mr. Miller then spoke at some length in support of the bill.

Mr. Coke followed in opposition, and Mr. Palmer in favor of it.

Mr. Miller, in reply to a question by Mr. Edmunds, said he would not ask a vote on the bill today, but would do so on Monday.

The senate then, at 4:45, went into executive session, and afterwards adjourned.

OUR FORTIFICATIONS.

The Bill Reported to the House—A Decrease of Appropriation.

WASHINGTON, July 17.—Mr. Holman, from the conference committee on the legislative appropriation bill, reported a disagreement.

Messrs. Holman, Canon and others represented that the senate not yield upon the amendment making appropriations for the pay of senators' private clerks, and in view of this statement Mr. Oates, of Alabama, moved that the house recede from its disagreement to the amendment.

The motion was lost—yeas 69, nays 143—and a further conference ordered.

After properly disposing of bills reported from the committees, the house went into committee of the whole on the fortification appropriation bill.

Mr. Forney, of Alabama, who has charge of the bill, briefly explained its provision for the appointment of a board to make lists to ascertain the most effective guns, projectiles, torpedoes and other implements and engines of war.

The debate then became political, in which only occasional and incidental reference to the bill was made. The speakers were Messrs. Butterworth, Reagan, Dingley, Morrow, Cutcheon, Viele and others. A good deal of criticism and ridicule were bestowed upon the bill and upon the committee for reporting a "fortification" bill for such a country as ours, providing for an appropriation for only six hundred thousand dollars.

Mr. Cutcheon thought that the title of the bill should be "to provide how not to do it," or at the very best, "a bill to get ready to prepare to begin to fortify."

Mr. Randall defended the bill. He said that he had frequently heard this country advertised to the nations of earth as defenseless. The nations of earth knew our strength better than American representatives on this floor supposed that they did. They did not take these utterances here as truthful in any particular. He maintained that the bill was in no respect hostile to the proper armament of the United States, but its purpose was to secure a knowledge of the requirements of the occasion.

Refering to Mr. Cutcheon's remark upon the defenseless condition of the lake coast, he suggested that Great Britain was wiser than the gentleman. England knew that the moment she began war with the United States, the United States meant that she should not have a foot of ground on this continent, and she was not going to be guilty of disturbing the peace of the country.

Several amendments looking to an increase of the amount of the appropriation were rejected.

The committee then rose and reported the bill to the house.

Mr. Randall moved to reduce the appropriation for the armament of fortifications from $500,000 to $100,000.

Mr. Reid of Maine, suggested that there should be a discussion over the proposition to vote a want of confidence in another department of the government.

Pending the vote on a demand for the previous question, the hour of 5 o'clock arrived and the house took recess until 8 o'clock, the evening session to be for the consolidation of business reported from the committee on printing.

At its evening session the house passed two dozen bills for the printing of the public documents, and, at half past ten, adjourned.

Official Announcements.

WASHINGTON, July 17.—It is officially announced today that the senate has rejected the nomination of John Goode to be solicitor-general; also that the senate has confirmed the nomination of Samuel F. Wilson to be United States marshal for the middle district of Tennessee.

THE MEXICAN REVOLUTION.

Excitement on the Texas Border—Mexican Troops Arriving.

NEW LAREDO, Tex., July 17—Excitement ran high in this city yesterday, caused by sensational reports coming in from Mier and Guerrero. It is said that the whole country in that section is in arms and that recruits are going there from the American side of the river. Buenato Das, an ex-revolutionist and bandit who had sojourned on the Texas side of the river for some time past has joined the insurgents in Mexico. Laredo has been chosen as headquarters for the government troops in the northern part of Tamaulipas. Last evening a Monterey train over the Mexican National road brought in 250 troops, who immediately went into camp at the government barracks, and are awaiting marching orders from Matamoras. They are commanded by Colonel Parras, an experienced soldier and an adapt at deposing troublesome civil-governors in favor of the supreme federal government.

BROWNSVILLE, Tex., July 17.—Revolution in Tamaulipas, Mexico, appears to be increasing, and troops in this section seem utterly unable to cope with it, and already they are making demonstrations towards this side. Last Wednesday night twenty of them crossed and occupied a ranch, six miles above this city, but as they committed no overt acts they were not arrested. Today, however, Sheriff Britton received the following dispatch from Santa Maria:

Last night fifteen men crossed from this side to La Balsa to join the party. Among them were Marcos De Luna, Manual Hinajosa, Bernado Gonzales and other good ones. They are stealing guns and pistols and horses from ranches in front of here. They killed one man yesterday because he would not give up his pistols.

Santa Maria is twenty-five miles above here on the river, and there is a small sub-post of United States cavalry stationed there. As the parties mentioned in the telegram are noted desperadoes and outlaws, indicted here, Britton at once left with a force of deputies for the scene of action, and on his representation, Major Kellogg sent up a force of cavalry to reinforce the sub-post and prevent any invasion of American soil. It is known that the revolutionists want arms badly, and as there is a large supply at Hyne's stores, in Santa Maria, it is feared that they may be tempted to attack and capture them.

MATAMARAS, Mex., July 17.—Further details of the attack by Tapias's men on the train at Copute station confirms the account sent yesterday. Colonel Prajadis Cauassos, with a force of cavalry, arrived at the station within an hour after the train had passed, but found that Tapias's men had also left. It is thought he is pressing them closely, though no account of the fight has yet been obtained. The revolutionists are raiding all the ranches and Thursday, near Solicieno, stopped a ranchero and demanded his horse and pistols. The latter refused and fired at one of the party, wounding him, when his body was riddled with bullets and strung to a tree on the roadside as a warning to others, and his horse and pistols carried off in triumph. The revolution appears to be spreading in the state of Nuevo Leon.

El Mundo of today published an extra with the following dispatch from Aqualegues, in that state:

To cry for the restoration of the constitution of 1857, valiant Colonel Francisco T. Casa, at the head of over fifty men has occupied the city. There is no limit to the enthusiasm. Mariana Cruz has also today been occupied, General Bravo and Luciana Hinojosa, Di Cos and Leos Aldamaxa and E. S Tisjerena captured Herreras, Avala, Ascension. Juan Riedrique took possession of Sibenas, Hidalgo and Vallecelio. The sons of Nuevo Leon, like all the inhabitants of the Mexican frontier, the classic land of liberty, have risen en masse to break the chains of slavery which oppress the nation.

Disaffection Among Republicans.

CHATTANOOGA, Tenn., July 17.—[Special.]—A committee of one hundred of the leading and most influential republicans of the city has been organized to make a fight on Gaston and Springfield, the republican candidates for judge and sheriff. The committee declare the candidates are incapable, obnoxious and unfit for the offices. Never in the history of Hamilton county has there been such dissatisfaction in the republican party as at present and the democratic nominees will have virtually a walk over. There are two factions of the G. O. P. in the county, and in each local campaign they knife each other.

THE WRONG WITNESS.

A SCENE AT THE TRIAL OF THE ANARCHISTS.

The Prosecution Introduces a Foreigner Who Does Not Give in the Evidence Expected—The Testimony of Waller, One of the Chicago Bomb-Throwers.

CHICAGO, July, 17—The courtroom where the trial of the anarchists is progressing was packed today. The disclosures of Gotfried Waller were of a character to excite the interest of the public to the highest pitch. The appearance of Waller as he gave his testimony was very peculiar. He is a medium sized man, with dark hair and luxuriant, but well trimmed whiskers. He has a drooping nose and clear brown eyes. His face was very pale, and bore an expression of shame and terror as he unfolded his sensational tale, revealing the secrets of Lehr and the verein. When the court was opened today, Waller was again placed on the stand. The witness testified that the bomb given him by Fischer on Thanksgiving day last, with instructions to use it on the police if they interfered with the meeting to be held that evening at Market street square. He kept in his house for two weeks then exploded it in the woods. Witness continued his testimony, suhing that Schonerbett was at the meeting.

"Did Schonerbett say anything at the meeting?"

"He said we should tell the other members what we had decided to do. He said the thing should commence in other places also."

"What do you mean by the 'thing?'"

"The revolution."

Witness testified that at a meeting held in Bohemian hall Sunday, May 2d, Engle and Fischer, two of the defendants, and a number of other socialists were present. Engle submitted a plan, according to which, as soon as it came to a conflict between the police and the northwestern groups, bombs should be thrown into the police stations. Then the Riflemen of Lehr and the wehr verein were to be posted at a distance and shoot all who should come out of the station-houses. That was to be kept up till we reached the city. We were to kill everybody who opposed us. Engle's plan was finally adopted by the meeting.

This concluded the direct examination. Counsel for the defense, after a conference asked to have Waller's testimony stricken out.

The court overruled this, and the cross examination of witness was begun.

Witness was severely cross examined, but his testimony remained unshaken. He said that no offers had been made to him to induce him to testify.

Absorbing as had been the morning session, the afternoon far surpassed it in interest. The first move on the part of the state was the introduction of another informer. This was Bernhardt Shrader who, the night preceding the bomb throwing, had been present in the conspiracy meeting at which Waller, the previous witness for the prosecution, had been president.

The second informer, Schrader, is a carpenter, and has lived in this country five years. He was born in Russia. His powerful frame, surmounted by a diminutive head, has a retreating forehead, and his weasel eyes at once attracted the gaze of the courtroom. Schrader's bronzed countenance gradually became ashen, as slowly through an interpreter, sentence by sentence, the assistant state's attorney proceeded to elicit from him statements concerning the meeting on Monday night in Grief's hall, where Informer Waller was chairman. Schrader said he reached the hall at 9 o'clock. The meeting was already in order. Waller was presiding. There were 30 or 40 present. It was agreed that if the police attacked any meeting then the anarchists were to mutually assist each other to destroy officers. Members of the northwest group should go to Wicker park station in case the police should make an attack. If any member had anything with him he should use it. Nothing was said about bombs. The attorneys for the state looked at each other and seemed slightly annoyed. They said: "Was anything said about dynamite?" A shake of his head was the response, and the faces of the prosecuting lawyers lengthened perceptibly. Another question was put:

"In the meeting did you hear any reference to the word ruhe?"

Again a shake of the head. The subject was quickly changed. Schrader told of attending the Haymarket meeting. He was in a Randolph street saloon when the bomb was thrown. He left the speakers because drops of rain had begun to fall. Witness then told in detail his connection with Lehr and the Wehr verein. They drilled once a week with Springfield rifles. He was No. 32. There were four companies in the city. The total number he did not know.

At this point Mr. Foster, for the defense, began to cross-examine.

Nothing was said about bombs, the witness continued, either at the Sunday or Monday meetings preceding the explosion of the bomb.

"Then in these two meetings no agreement was made," asked Mr. Foster, "to throw bombs at Haymarket?"

"Not while I was there."

"Then it was not agreed to use dynamite to destroy the pplice at Haymarket?"

"Not that I am aware. Nobody asked me to take a bomb to the meeting, I know that when the police should come each one should help himself. No, not with bombs that I know. No, I did not anticipate any trouble at Haymarket after I left. When the bomb was thrown I was quietly sitting in the saloon. Yes, the sign of the Greek letter was the signal for meeting for months previous to the Haymarket fight. No, it was not agreed that there should be trouble that night, only we knew that if the police made an attack, then there might be trouble."

Again the prosecution took the witness in hand.

Mr. Ingham, holding a long manuscript up to view, and eyeing Schrader in a sharp manner, asked abruptly:

"Did you not make Police Captain Schaack a written statement?"

"We object," was shouted by everyone of the lawyers for the defense. They rose on their feet excitedly, appealing to the judge.

Hot discussion ensued. The defense strained every nerve to prevent a whisper even of what Schrader told the police reaching the ears of the jury.

At length, apparently in desperation, an assistant to the state's attorney blurted out:

"We wish to show that time and time again witness has said he heard the word 'ruhe' used."

Judge Gary was pounding his desk and the words of impetuous Ingham were lost. Then the fact came out with no attempt at concealment that the state had been deceived and possibly duped. The testimony of Schrader is not what they had expected him to give. Black and Foster were in high glee. Ingham, his face red with anger, said:

"It is evident from the action of the witness and from the action of the counsel, that Schrader is their witness and not our witness."

And forthwith the ostensible informer was dropped like a hot coal.

Lieutenant Steel now took the stand. He was in charge of a company of twenty-five officers in Haymarket. He gave a brief account of the massacre. The police had their revolvers in their pockets, clubs in their belts and their hands by their sides. When they reached the speaker's wagon, some one in the crowd shouted:

"Here comes the blood hounds. You do your duty and we will do ours."

Then the bomb was thrown. Smaller explosion followed like the report of a large pistol.

Cross examined, witness thought the manner in which the crowd separated before the police, was peculiar. A peaceable, lawful assemblage might have separated in that manner, but it was not likely. He was close to the wagon, but after Captain Ward's command to disperse, heard no expression by Fielding.

Lieutenant Quinn, who also commanded a company of the police in the Haymarket affair, succeeded Steele as witness.

THOMPSON'S PLEA.

The Absconding Cashier of Provident Bank Leaves a Letter Behind Him.

ST. LOUIS, July 17.—Almon B. Thompson, defaulting cashier of Provident Savings bank, wrote a full confession of his crookedness and peculations before he fled and placed it in the hands of a trusted friend. The cashier says:

In the bank, the situation is this—that there are false entries on the books. Twenty thousand dollars of what I owe the bank is hidden in the exchange and maturing account. It will show instently on examination. I owe on my notes $23,000. I have indorsed all valid or valuable paper. A Crystal City certificate is fraudulent and one certificate of the Provident Savings bank stock for fifty shares is fraudulent. I collected $425 of the art school subscription and used the money. I collected $554 of the Knights Templar commandery subscription and used the money. There is an overdraft in my account of W. H. Howe, artist. He does not know it. He gave me a note for it, and supposes it is a loan from me.

Thompson then gives in detail his indebtedness to the bank footing up about $70,000. He then concludes:

Poor, alone, disgraced, an outcast that must hide my name, my family, what can I do? But, at heart, I am not a thief. I might have robbed your safe, but kind God gave me strength to resist. If God will give me strength, it shall be my life's work to try to repay. If my good father will pay me out and you will spare me criminally, I will go to work at whatever I may find to begin again not in St. Louis, but alone, among strangers, by some other name. Spare me, for God's sake; for my family's sake. And Oh! my God! What will my children do? Be kind to them. Spare me. I have told all. I can do nothing more. Sell out my household goods, but, oh! my God! do help my poor wife and children. Let me work. Give me a chance to help them—for God's sake do. Show this to my father and brother and wife. God bless them and keep them. All is dust to me."

THIEVES FALL OUT

And Prefer Charges Against Each Other—Bribing Members of the Assembly.

ST. LOUIS, July 17.—The grand jury closed its investigation of the charges against members of the house of delegates last night, and returned indictments against six of them. Waters, Pishon, Brueggemann, Gartenbach, Keenan, and one other, whose name has not been ascertained, were indicted for drunkenness in office, and Keenan, Pishon and Brady for bribery in connection with the investigation of the Casino theater investigation. when the bill revoking that theater's license for indecent performances was before the house. The jury returned two other indictments for attempted bribery—one against Dr. Wellington Adams, the other against Charles A. Davis, an attorney. These gentlemen have charge of the electric railway bill, and were present at almost every session of the house, urging its passage. The bill failed to pass, however, and it is said that Dr. Adams became engaged at the members who had voted against the measure, and threatened in the lobby of the house to show up some of them in such an unfavorable light as to make them decidedly uncomfortable. Then followed the charges against twelve delegates, that they were ineligible to office, having perjured themselves by swearing falsely to the oath when they took their seats. This exposure naturally aroused the wrath of the accused and they determined to pay the doctor off in his own coin and gave information to the jury, which led to his indictment. This information being that he had offered two of the members a large sum of money for their affirmative votes upon the bill.

Dr. Adams states, however, that he never attempted to bribe these members, but that they, on the other hand, came to him and volunteered to vote for the bill for a certain money consideration. Bench warrants for the arrest of the indicted men have been placed in the hands of the sheriff and Delegate Rishon and Dr. Adams, were arrested this afternoon and brought into court, where they furnished bonds in the sum of $1,500. Other warrants will be served as soon as possible.

ON CANADA'S SAFE SHORE.

A Hypocritical Young Man Forges Pension Receipts and Skips.

PITTSBURG, July 17.—Samuel K. Gay, chief clerk in the Pittsburg pension office, has probably gone to Canada to join the great array of bank cashiers. Yesterday afternoon Pension Agent Evrett discovered that Gay had forged the names of pensioners to three checks aggregating $800. An information for forgery was made before United States Commissioner McCandless, and a warrant issued for his arrest but before the officer could serve it, Gay got wind of the movement and quickly left the city. Rumor is busy with the case, and conjecture is rife that the amount above stated may be only a fraction of Gay's stealings. Several weeks ago an investigation of the accounts of the pension agent in Pittsburg was made and it was then found that there were several discrepancies involving considerable sums of money. There was every evidence of embezzlement, covered by falsification of the books. Errett was then notified by the treasury department to look after his clerks, as some one was doing wrong. Nothing further was heard of the matter until last evening, when Errett telegraphed to Washington that Gay had absconded.

Gay was the son of wealthy parents, and some years ago he married a relative of Mayor Fulton. He was an exemplary young man; in fact, a strict attendant at church, quite active in the Young Men's Christian association, and a prominent leader in the Murphy temperance movement. He took a great interest in lectures by clergymen, and was head and front of nearly all the movements to bring Mr. Talmage to Pittsburgh. Even his most intimate friends never saw anything in his conduct that would arouse suspicion. Gay had a salary of $75 per month.

THE TYPO BOYCOTTERS.

Printers in New Haven Convicted of Conspiracy.

NEW HAVEN, Conn., July 17.—Judge Stoddard's charge to the jury in the conspiracy case against Benjamin T. Glidden, David T. McNamara, Thomas F. Mulcahy and J. Frederick Busche, members of the typographical union, charged with conspiracy to injure the business of the Courier publishing company, occupied one hour on its delivery. The charge was generally thought to be rather favorable to the defendants than otherwise. The judge explained to the jury each of the six counts in detail, and cited many authorities having bearing on the case.

The jury then retired and were out one hour, and when they returned the verdict was announced, finding McNamara, Glidden and Mulcahy guilty of each of the six counts in the indictment. Busche was acquitted. Counsel for defense will file a bill of exceptions and move that sentence be deferred. It is probable that the defense will seek further adjudication in the supreme court.

A QUARRY COMPROMISE.

Married Men to Receive an Advance—Single Men a Reduction.

CHICAGO, July 17.—The strike of the quarrymen at Lamont, Illinois, at last is at an end. A majority of the men who quit work last week will be at their posts of duty today, and the remainder will return to their places on Monday. The compromise agreed upon provides that all married employes shall receive the advanced wages agreed upon on the first of May last, and that single men will accept a reduction of twenty-five cents per day from such rates, which places them in the same position which they occupied previous to that date.

Two Sad Accidents.

CHATTANOOGA, Tenn., July 17.—[Special.] Amos Clark, a young man, living in Dade county, Ga., this evening playfully pointed a gun at his ten-year-old brother. The weapon was discharged, killing the little fellow instantly.

Dave Parks and Granville Wells, two well-known painters, were thrown from a swinging scaffold today by the rope breaking, and Parks received internal injuries which caused his death. Wells was so badly injured that he will be crippled for life.

Vancouver Again Destroyed.

VICTORIA, B. C., July 17.—It is reported that the town of Vancouver, B C., is again in ashes. The telegraph office there has been destroyed and no particulars can be obtained.

DILKE'S DISGRACE.

THE GREAT SCANDAL CASE ON TRIAL IN LONDON.

The Courtroom Crowded With Eager Listeners—The Mysterious French Woman—A Servant Girl's Testimony—Sir Charles's Answer—Interesting Points of the Trial.

LONDON, July 17.—In the divorce case of Crawford against Crawford and Dilke today, Sir Charles Dilke declined to state whether or not he had ever maintained criminal relationship with Mrs. Crawford's mother. Sarah Grey, a servant in the co-respondent's employ, being sworn, admitted under pressue that she had met "Fanny," the alleged French mistress of Sir Charles Dilke, by appointment, six weeks ago, but did not remember what passed at the meeting.

Interest in the case has not diminished, but on the contrary has increased. The room in which the trial is being carried on was even more crowded today than yesterday. It has developed that Mrs. Crawford recently made a statement to the queen's proctor, the exact nature of which is not known, but it is expected that she will be called upon to substantiate it, and some new facts, perhaps of a startling character, may be elicited. Public opinion is beginning to raise an outcry against the English divorce system which is declared to be scandalous. In other countries, when a divorce is granted, the case is settled, but in Great Britain, the public have the enjoyment of hearing two sets of proceedings in one divorce case. The reporters were again much crowded today, but their facilities for work were far greater than yesterday. Ladies were present in large numbers, some of them smiling, some demure, but all on the qui vive for racy revelations.

When Sir Charles Dilke entered the court room he looked calm and dignified, and showed none of his old audacity. He sat gloomily, with one finger pressed against his forehead, and occasionally glanced furtively at the audience. When under examination he was much more subdued than yesterday. It is the concensus of opinion that Sir Charles makes a bad witness, failing to answer questions asked until absolutely forced to and showing a general disposition to debate and quibble. One of Mr. Matthews's questions which caused a flutter was:

"Were you ever a lover of Virginia's mother?"

The reply came:

"I have been asked previously a somewhat similar question, and I must decline to answer."

This response created a sensation. During his evidence Sir Charles declared that he had never kissed Virginia Crawford or made love or paid any court to her and had never been improperly or unduly familiar; in fact, that he was on terms of ordinary acquaintanceship with her. "My reasons for appealing to the proctor," he continued, "arose from comments of the newspapers and the general persecution. When I met Crawford I inquired after his wife's health, using the nickname 'Mc.' by which he was always known."

Sarah Gray, Fannie's sister, failed to remember whether Sir Charles and Fanny ever had moments alone in Sarah's house. Sarah was for twelve years in Sir Charles's service, and never saw the slightest wrong between him and Mrs. Crawford. She never saw Mrs. Crawford enter Sir Charles's bedroom, nor did she ever help to dress Mrs. Crawford. Continuing, witness said:

"I never myself behaved improperly with Sir Charles. I saw my sister Fanny about five months ago. She is married now. Her name is Mrs. Stock."

Witness caused frequent laughter by her shrewd cockney replies. When asked if she knew Mrs. Crawford by sight she replied, "No."

Mr. Matthews asked, pointing to the corner where Mrs. Crawford and her two sisters sat: "Do you recognize the face there?"

Witness answered: "No."

The remainder of evidence tended to show that Mrs. Crawford frequently called at Sir Charles Dilke's house, but nothing was elicited to prove that criminal relations existed between them.

A FRENCH DUEL.

The Baron Fires at the General, Who Empties His Pistol In the Air.

PARIS, July 17.—The duel between General Boulanger, minister of war, and Baron DeLareinty, arising from remarks of the baron in the senate on Thursday, relative to the expulsion of the duke D'Aumale, was fought at 9 o'clock this morning. The weapons were pistols. The place of meeting was in the forest near Mendon, five miles west of Paris. When the command to fire was given, Baron DeLareinty shot at General Boulanger. The latter cooly awaited the result of the shot without firing himself. Finding himself untouched by his opponent's bullet, General Boulanger raised his own pistol and fired up into the air. The combatants then left the field. General Boulanger returning to Paris, went straight to his office at the war department. A large crowd had assembled to learn the result of the duel and gave General Boulanger an ovation when he appeared.

The official report of the duel says that Baron Larienty desired that it be fought with swords, but that General Boulanger had the right of choice and named pistols. Both combatants fired when the signal was given and both were untouched. It was found that Boulanger's pistol missed fire. The seconds declared that honer was satisfied and the combatants shook hands. Report does not confirm the statement that Boulanger fired in the air.

The Temps account of the duel says that after the encounter, Larienty, holding out his hand to Boulanger, said: "I have never doubted your loyalty nor your chivalrous courage," and that Boulanger replied: "I never thought that you accused me of personal cowardice, but I was anxious to face your fire."

Members of the cabinet, and scores of deputies and senators, have visited General Boulanger at the war department to personally congratulate him upon the bravery of his action in his duel with Baron Lareinty.

BARTLEY CAMPBELL'S INSANITY

The Extent to Which His Strange Imagination Carries Him.

NEW YORK, July 17.—[Special.]—Bartley Campbell's insane imagination has taken a turn that, if he were at all responsible mentally, would be the climax of sacrilege. His newest fancy is wilder than any that he ever could have indulged as a dramatist, and his conduct is deemed wonderful even in a big asylum full of lunatics. He believes himself to be the Almighty, and the Bloomingdale Asylum is to him a resplendent mansion in heaven. He imagines that he reigns supreme. The other patients are saints and angels. The materials of the house are fabulously fine. The hard floors are undulous clouds. The garments are luminous. Everything is supernal. He thinks that he is provided with wings for locomotion, and, instead of walking in an ordinary fashion, he skips and leaps about, waving his long arms in a most extravagant fashion, under the impression that he is floating easily and gracefully through space. Meanwhile he utters unmusical cries, in the idea that he is singing celestial songs. An old, common armchair is his throne, and he poses in it, in mock majesty, by the hour. Several of the lunatics fall in with his freak, and obey his mandates, or think they do. But there is one figure, important to him in his mimic life, that is not there in reality. It is the young actress who played the heroine in his last drama, "Paquita"—a work in which his brain disease was first shown to the public. She was a novice, very pretty, but inadequate to the requirements of a leading role. Campbell deemed her a remarkable performer, however, and indulged in many silly whims concerning her. During his earlier time in the asylum he was at work, hard but incoherently, on tragedies for her to enact. Now she is the Virgin Mary, ever present to his vision, and he commands the other inmates of Bloomingdale to worship her. He angrily resents the slightest levity on this subject, and promptly consigns to everlasting flames every offender.

MACON MISCELLANY.

THE DOINGS OF A DAY IN THE CENTRAL CITY.

A Mad Dog Creates a Stir—Did Not Want to Go—Thrown Fifty Feet—A Narrow Escape—A Chicken Thief—Prospecting in Macon—The Government Building—Etc.

MACON, Ga., July 17.—[Special.]—Yesterday morning about 6 o'clock, as Officer Henry Was passing across Poplar street in front of the city hall, he discovered a dog coming down the street near where the old skating rink used to be, and the officer thought at the time that the dog was playing,and never paid any attention to it.

The dog, however, was mad, and kept his speed, turning neither to left nor right, but ran down the street until it came to Mr. Pomeroy's store, in the armory building. Just as the dog got to the store Mr. Pomery was in the act of closing the door, preparatory to going home, and his wife and little child were standing in the doorway, when the dog passed, snapping at the little child, and would have bitten it had it not been for Mrs Pomeroy, who, seeing the danger, pulled the child out of the way, and the dog passed on. In an instant Mr. Pomeroy closed the door, shutting the dog inside. He then called a policeman to come and dispatch the little intruder. Officer Kennedy was passing along about that time, and was told of what had happened, but as he had nothing to kill him with, started on toward the city hall. When he arrived he told Officer Henry, who first discovered the dog, and in company with him they went back to the store and, after searching for an hour in every conceivable place, failed to find him. They knew that it was impossible for it to have gotten out, but they closed the door until this morning, when they returned and found it secreted in a drawer. It had no symptoms of being mad, but it was thought best to put an end to his traveling about at such a rate of speed as it was yesterday evening, and it was accordingly dispatched.

It was a very narrow escape for the little child.

Fight at a Festival.

MACON, Ga., July 17.—[Special.]—Last night the O. I. G. T. club had a festival, near Sandy bottom, and before it was over a man by the name of Bond was considerably bruised up.

It seems that some of the Sandy bottom fellows and Bond got into a dispute, when the Sandy fellows let on to him and used him up generally.

He is very badly hurt, and we predict the next festival he goes to he will leave before he is seen. But it is a pity he had no assistance, that he might have learned those Sandy fellows a lesson.

Did Not Want to Go.

MACON, Ga., July 17.—[Special.]—Last night about 11 o'clock on Fourth street, in the Kennesaw restaurant, one McGhee and Mershon were found by Officers Johnson and Thorpe drunk and cursing.

The officers were requested to take them to the barracks, and they at once started with the two men. They went quietly along with the officers until they reached Ingall's corner, when they began to rear and kick the officers. The officers tried in every way to carry them without hurting them, but they could not be coaxed, and became more frantic when the officers tried to get them in a hack. They refused to rido and had to be clubbed and dragged to the barracks.

This morning they were tried before the recorder and a fine of $25 was imposed upon McGhee and $10 on Mershon.

They have given the officers trouble before.

Thrown Fifty Feet.

MACON, Ga., July 17.—[Special.]—This morning about 8 o'clock one of the dynamite cartridges that are being used in blasting the rock at the foot of Third street, for the purpose of clearing away and preparing a place for the shed of the East Tennessee depot, exploded and tearing up a very large rock and throwing a piece across the street, striking a dwelling house, but not doing any damage.

The piece of rock was about as large as a man's head, but was sent whizzing as though it was no larger than an egg.

A Narrow Escape.

MACON, Ga., July 17.—[Special.]—Yesterday evening, out near town, on the place of Messrs. Abels, a little boy came near meeting with what would have been a horrible death. Messrs. Ables were in their field mowing grass, and the little son of one of them was with them, assisting in the work. The little fellow was at work near the reaper, when he was startled by the noise of a rattlesnake, and looking down, he saw a very large one in one foot of him, and in a twinkling the snake made a strike at him, but fortunately missed his mark, striking one of the blades of the reaper, cutting his head off, which no doubt saved the little boy's life.

The snake is a very large one, having twelve rattles and one button, which shows he is a very old one, and has no doubt done much damage.

Another Chicken Thief.

MACON, Ga., July 17.—[Special.]—Between sundown yesterday evening and daybreak this morning some chicken thief entered the fowl house of Mr. W. R. Kent, who lives on Oak street, and gathered therefrom some twenty fowls of various sizes and kinds; among them were some very fine Plymouth Rocks that Mr. Kent would not have taken a dollar apiece for.

It is an every night thing for some fowl house to be robbed, but last night was the largest capture that has been made recently. Mr. Kent offers twenty-five dollars reward for the capture of the thief with sufficient evidence to convict, and our police will be pretty apt to catch them in less than twenty-four hours, as they are always wide awake, and never let an opportunity or a chicken thief escape.

Prospecting in Macon.

MACON, Ga., July 17.—[Special.]—Right Rev. Leo Haid, D. D., abbot of St. Mary's benedictine abbey and college, North Carolina, spent yesterday in the city, looking at Pio Nono college. Right Rev. Haid is a distinguished gentleman and represents an order about 14,000 years old. He came to look at the college with a view of purchasing it and establishing in its stead a college of the benedictine order here. It is understood, however, that he does not think it a suitable place for such an institution, and will not purchase it.

We disagree with him, for we think it a piece of property so situated that it cannot be equaled in beauty for such a college, and hope it may yet fall into the hands of some good order.

The Government Building.

MACON, Ga., July 17.—[Special.]—Work on the government building has been stopped, and almost every one is inquiring "what is the matter that it does not go on." It seems that everything stopped at once, and no one knows what stopped it. It is a building long needed in Macon and should and will, no doubt, be pushed forward when once it gets in good headway.

AFTER MANY YEARS.

A Farmer Recovers a Horse Eleven Years After It Was Stolen.

STONE MOUNTAIN, Ga., July 17.—[Special.] On the night of July 20, 1875, John W.Say,who resides in Clark county, five miles north of Athens, had a valuable horse stolen from him by Austin Edwards, colored. Mr. Say gave chase after the thief and horse to Conyers, but could trace them no further, and after spending a good deal of time and money returned home, but the thief was caught and tried and sent to the chaingang for ten years. He refused to tell where the horse was traded off. During this long period Mr. Say had two sons to grow up to manhood, and married two sisters residing in Gainesville, Ga., and said two sisters had another sister, who married William Hadaway, DeKalb county while she was on a visit to Stone Mountain. Hadaway had never met his brother-in-laws at that time, but made them a visit from Gainesville, where he now resides, and was speaking to Mr. Say about a certain horse he owned once, and how much his wife admired the horse. The Mr. Says saw at once that the horse alluded to was the one stolen from their father, They at once reported the information and Mr. Say arrived here on the 15th and sued out a possessory warrant for his horse, which was in the possession of S. G. Thompson. The warrant was issued by J. W. McCurdy, J. P., and put in the hands of W. G. Langford, L. C., who soon had the horse in custody. The horse was identified by Mr. Say, as he had a certain mark that he could not be mistaken about. Besides he has an abundance of evidence proving the facts. The horse has been traded quiet a number of times during the eleven years' stay in DeKalb and Fulton counties, and a great deal of litigation may grow out of the deficient title of the horse. No one is suspected of any criminal connection with the affair, except Edwards, who has served out his sentence.

THE NEWS FROM SAVANNAH.

An Old Offender in Trouble Again—Death of a Marine.

SAVANNAH, Ga., July 17.—[Special.]—William Stokes, a twenty-year-old darky, who has served more than two-thirds of his life in jail, was arrested again last night on the charge of larceny from the house, and committed for trial this morning, and the chances are will soon be back at his old occupation, doing the county the same service in stripes.

Captain E. Neilson, of the Norwegian brig, J. W. Williams, died here at the city hospital today of typhoid malarial fever. He was taken sick about a month ago, and though every attention was shown him grew steadily worse. His ship sailed about a fortnight ago in charge of the first mate. He was a native of Norway, where he leaves a wife and a large circle of friends. Flags of the shipping on the river today were at half mast in respect to his memory.

The mortuary report of the health officer for the past week shows 26 deaths, 11 white, 15 black, from various causes. Of these 13 are under 10 years of age.

A Laborer Loses His Hand.

HAMPTON, Ga., July 17.—[Special.]—A remarkable piece of heroism was displayed by John Taylor, a colored boy, here in an accident that befell him yesterday. His hand was caught in a separator and ground nearly off above the wrist, six miles in the country, and it was about four hours before securing medical aid, during which time he never murmured. Amputation below the elbow was necessary, and he is now doing well. Rev. S. H. Griffin, in whose employ the unfortunate boy was working, will doubtless bestow every attention that humanity would dictate.

Killed by a Train.

WAYCROSS, Ga., July 17.—[Special.]—Henry Williams, colored, was killed by train No. 73, at the 102 mile post, Blackburn's wood rack, where he resided. At the 102 mile post, where the train sidetracked, the engineer, while oiling, discovered the body lying near the pilot of his engine. The deceased was brought here this morning, and a jury of inquest was summoned, which, after hearing the evidence, found that Williams came to death by his own carelessness.

A Bad Character Arrested.

ROME, July 17.—[Special.]—Sheriff Henderson, of Pickens county, late last night arrested a white man whose name is Williams, and brought him to town today. It is alleged that Williams committed arson in Tennessee, and afterwards went to Pickens county, where he became a noted cattle thief. He left that county recently, and was followed by Sheriff Henderson, who last night succeeded in capturing him just this side of the Alabama line, near Gaylesville.

MONROE FEMALE COLLEGE.

The Closing Exercises Fully Described—An Interesting Occasion.

FORSYTH, Ga., July 17.—[Special.]—Our little city on Wednesday last was crowded with visitors from "far and near" to witness the closing exercises of Monroe Female college. It was a beautiful day and the pleasant and commodious chapel was soon filled with those who delight to honor this institution with their presence on such occasions. The exercises were opened with an appropriate prayer by Rev. Dr. Frank Hunt, of Mississippi. The "Beautiful Bride's March" was then performed by Misses Napier, Thomas, Singleton and Mitchell. Miss Susie Shepherd, of Americus, then read the salutatory, which was one of the most beautiful productions ever read before a commencement audience. The young lady was warmly applauded when she concluded.

Miss Kate Napier, of Forsyth, read a well conceived and beautifully written essay on "Night Brings Out the Stars."

The "Death of Warren" was then sweetly sung by Miss Ida Thomas.

Miss Laura Clark next entertained the audience with "Woman's Work."

The subject of Miss Lillie Mitchell, of Lawrenceville, Ga., was "We Seniors."

Waltz song, "Orange Blossoms," was most exquisitely rendered by Miss Rosa Ryals, of McVille, who delighted the audience several times with her sweet voice.

"Sweet Old Songs," by Miss Mamie Pinckard, of Friendship, Ga., was well read.

Miss Ida Thomas, of Forsyth, read a most admirable essay on "Journalism."

"The Girl I Left Behind Me," by Miss Kate Napier on the piano, accompanied by Dr. Branham on the flute, took the old soldiers back to "days long ago," when first called to their country's service.

The strong and well cultivated voices of Mrs. J. A. Banks and Mrs. C. L. Moore gave us "Hear me Norma."

The degrees were then conferred upon the graduating class by Colonel A. D. Hammond in behalf of the trustees, who also announced that the following names had been placed upon the roll of honor, an average of 97 for the scholastic year being required by senior class: Miss Kate Napier, Miss Susie Shepherd. Junior class—Misses Sallie Barnes, Lucile Roberts and Rosa Smith. Sophmore class—Missess Fannie Chambless and Fannie Singleton. Freshman class—Miss Florence Bramlett. Preparatory and primary class—Misses Alice Bramblett, Sallie Roberts, Mattie L. Banks, Cora Bramlett and Nannie Merritt. The following who were kept from school a portion of the time for providential causes, deserve honorable mention, viz: Misses Minnie Pinckard, Rose Ryals, Mattie Merritt and Lyra Banks.

The Chasseau march was then performed on two pianos, organ and flute, by Miss Taylor Goodwyn Napier, Mrs Banks and Dr. Branham.

A very appropriate address was then delivered by President Asbury, when the parting song was sang by the senior class.

R. L. Berner then introduced Colonel John S. Davidson, of Augusta, who delivered the literary address in an eloquent and impressive manner. His subject was, "What Will She Do With It?" He discussed the various relation in which woman found herself in this age in reference to the duties she owed the world as a Christian, a wife or a mother, and drew a picture of the civilization of the past as compared with the present and the added responsibilities which the present imposes on the woman who are annually sent forth from the institutions of Georgia to become the wives and mothers of our land; showed the close relationship which existed between the intelligence and purity of woman, and the manhood and strength of the age; contended that women in the dual relation in which they sustained that of social and domestic, should be cultivated rather than learned, and by comparisons drawn from the past indicated the advance which had been made in the promotion to her proper sphere, while at the same time presenting the dangers which surrounded many of the teachers connected with female education.

Thus closed the commencement exercises of Monroe female college.

COLUMBUS CHRONICLES.

Railroad Men in the City Looking after their Interests.

COLUMBUS, Ga., July 17.—[Special.]—Arthur Pou, chief engineer of the Savannah, Dublin and Western railroad, has been in the city today for the purpose of ascertaining the interest which our people feel in this line. He met with satisfactory encouragement.

Work on the Georgia Midland and Gulf railroad has been pushed with greater rapidity this week than any time since its inauguration. The weather has been all the contractors could have desired.

Mr. George H. Wooley has been appointed road master of the Columbus and Western railway. He is a son of the lamented Colonel W. M. Wooley.

The congressional convention meets in Savannah on Tuesday, and it is believed Mr. Grimes will be nominated early in the balloting.

Protracted Meeting in Adairsville.

ADAIRSVILLE, Ga., July 17.—[Special.]—Ever since the 24th of Juue our people have been enjoying a protracted meeting at the Union church. It has been a glorious time. Rev. Mr. Thomas has had able assistance from visiting friends. Among them are the Rev. Mr. Quillian, the presiding elder of this district; Rev. John B. Robbins, of Dalton; Rev. Mr. English, of Kingston. For the last week the services have been conducted as follows: Nine o'clock a. m., prayer meeting and preaching in afternoon, ladies prayer meeting at four o'clock, afternoon preaching in open air at the head of Broad street, in front of the hotel, services at 7 p. m. at the church. The open air service has been a good thing for many.

The Crop Outlook in Thomas.

THOMASVILLE, Ga., July 17.—[Special.]—The crop outlook is gloomy. The incessant rains have done untold damage. Even the potato crop is suffering from too much wet weather. There has not been a day in over a month that rain has not fallen somewhere in this county. You have printed already that the pear crop was ruined by the storm, and you will not miss the truth far by saying the corn crop is not much better. The leaves on cotton are beginning to look sickly and drop off. Just as soon as the rains cease a few days of sunshine will make the fruit also drop off, and knowing ones say that the cotton crop is going to be under an average. This is certainly discouraging. Last year the drouth damaged all crops at least one-half and this year floods will produce about the same result. A half crop two consecutive years will not support the farmers and allow them to keep out of debt.

Georgia Patents.

Mr. H. N. Jenkins, solicitor of patents, Washington, D. C., officially reports to THE CONSTITUTION the following complete list of patents granted Georgia inventors for the week ending July 13, 1886: J. A. Adams, Atlanta, steam boiler feeder; D. H. Jenkins, Frankville, backband buckle; W. S. Gordon, Atlanta, coal mining machine.

The Augusta Strike.

AUGUSTA, Ga., July 17.—[Special.]—The strike continues in the Augusta factory, with no prospects of settlement. CONYERS, Ga., July 17.—[Special.]—Mr. Zach Butler, proprietor of the hotel here, was badly knifed last night by Mr. Frank McCalla.

Some of the young men wanted to have a dance last night and sent to Atlanta for a negro band. The band arrived about 8 o'clock and McCalla took them to the hotel and asked Butler to give them their supper. Butler told him that he could not do it unless he was paid for it in advance, as he had been beat several times in that way. This made McCalla mad, and he cursed Butler in a most vigorous manner. Butler ordered McCalla out of the hotel but he would not go. Butler then stepped into a room near by, and while he was in there his father walked to the door of the room leading into the hall where McCalla was standing, when McCalla advanced towards him, and Butler, Sr., thinking he meant to attack him with his knife, struck him with his walking stick. Then McCalla attempted to cut him when young Butler interfered, and McCalla then turned on him and cut him in three places. The first was a serious cut about three inches long across the breast, laying the flesh open to the ribs. Another was a deep gash on the left hand, just above the little finger. The third was a slight scratch on the thigh. In a few minutes he was as bloody as a hog.

Drs. Rosser and Travis dressed the wounds, and under their skillful treatment he is resting very well today.

FROM THE UNIVERSITY.

The New Trustees Chosen--Dr. W. L. Jones Elected Professor.

ATHENS, Ga., July 17.—[Special.]—At the meeting of the board of trustees of the university today, Dr. W. L. Jones, of Edgewood, was elected to the chair made vacant by the death of General Browne—that of agriculture and natural history. Dr. Jones is considered one of the most learned agriculturalists in the country and is an elegant gentleman and prominent scholar. He was formerly a professor in the university and has many strong friends in Athens who will welcome him back. His election was unsought for on his part, except by written application a short while ago, and after more than a hundred other applications had been received.

NEW TRUSTEES CHOSEN.

Captain Harry Jackson and Henry W. Grady were today elected by the board to the life memberships made vacant by the death of General Robert Toombs and Colonel D. W. Lewis.

THE CLASS TREE EXERCISES.

The class tree exercises today were very interesting. The seniors assembled around their tree according to a time honored custom, and for more than an hour entertained the large crowd that assembled to witness the interesting exercises. The speech of Mr. John Grant, of Atlanta, the class orator, is pronounced as one of the finest ever delivered in the college. He is the son of Captain W. D. Grant, and leaves the university with a splendid record and promise of a brilliant future.

A TOUCHING PLEA.

Old Phil Thompson's Remarkable Defense of a Thief Just After the War.

From the Louisville Times.

A few years after the war Ed. Collins, a shiftless fellow of Mercer county, was indicted for stealing cattle. The case came up before Judge J. C. Wickliffe, now United States attorney here, then circuit judge. The trial was in the courthouse at Harrodsburg. Phil Thompson, Jr., was prosecuting attorney, and Phil Thompson, Sr., and Colonel Thomas C. Bell, now assistant United States attorney here, appeared for the defense, Ed. Butts was circuit clerk. Collins had been a soldier in the federal army, while every man on the jury, the prosecuting attorney, circuit clerk and the judge himself had fought for the confederacy.

The witnesses were brought forward and a plain case of theft was made out against Collins. The only dependence of the defense was the testimony of Collin's daughter, Rose, who was to prove an alibi. She was a beautiful woman, with well rounded figure, deep black eyes, a complexion in which the hues of health sat beauteously enthroned, and black hair that swept unconfined almost to the floor in long waves. She was made to tell her story for all it was worth, and Colonel Bell made a most touching plea, appealing to the sympaties of the jury for a beautiful woman in distress with all the power of language he could summon. But the veterans of Donelson and Shiloh were unmoved.

Then old Phil Thompson laid himself out to mystify them and raise a doubt of the prisoner's guilt, and he, too, finally began to appeal to their gallantry. In the midst of a glowing sentence, however, he found the jury yawning, looking out of the window, and wholly inattentive. Breaking off his pathos, the old lawyer leaned back on one table a moment, eyed the jury quizzically with a humorous twinkle in his eye, and said:

"Look here, gentlemen, this stealing was done during the war, and you can't do anything with a man for that. You, Tom Mundy!" he continued, turning and pointing to the foreman of the jury, a strapping big Kentuckian, "don't you remember that sheep you stole in Powell's Valley? You can't convict Ed Collins." There was a general waking up of the jury, and a smile went round. "And you, Dan Bond; you know that horse you stole from Lord Alexander in the spring of '62? You can't send a man to prison for stealing cattle."

The smile broke into an open guffaw in one or two places, and half a dozen men on the back seats stood up.

As the old man took up the jury one by one and recalled his short comings, the laughter became general and continuous. Finally he said: "And there's my Phil. Wasn't he one of Morgan's worse horse thieves? What can he say against Ed Collins? And you, Ed Butts; you remember that raid on that old Yankee sympathizer in East Tennessee? And can you raise your voice against him? And his honor on the bench, if the truth were known—" But the rest of the sentence was drowned in a shout of laughter and uproar of applause that shook the building.

The jury was out three minutes and they brought in a verdict for acquittal.

Unwilling Lingerers at Church.

From the Liverpool Post.

A very painful scene occurred in a village near Liverpool on Sunday week. It seems that the church has lately been undergoing repairs. Among other improvements a new coat of paint was placed on the pews, followed by a coat of varnish. The result was most pleasing to the eye, but unfortunately, the varnish had been applied so late in the week that it had not time to become hard before Sunday, when the congregation flocked to their seats. No apparent inconvenience was suffered until the clergyman was about to deliver the benediction, when the congregation were horrified to find that they were unable to stand up—they were, in fact, glued, or rather varnished to their seats. Their spasmodic efforts to rise were most disressing to witness. In vain did the clergyman exhort them from the pulpit to resignation, They were seized with a kind of panic, all the more frightful because they were for the moment powerless. At last, by what seemed to be a simultaneous and herculean jerk, they managed to tear themselves from their sittings; but at what a sacrifice! The pews were literally covered with Sunday apparel. Shreds of silk, lawns, calicos, broadcloth and cassimeres were left as souvenirs of the tenacity of varnish used in beautifying that church, and the hapless congregation, rushing from the doors, hurried homeward with an expression on their faces as though their hearts were even more severely rent than their garments.

BUXOM widow (at evening party)—"Do you understand the language of flowers, Dr. Crusty?" Dr. Crusty (an old bachelor)—"No, ma'am." "You don't know if yellow means jealousy?" Dr. Crusty—"No, ma'am. Yellow means biliousness."—Chicago Herald.

ECZEMA ERADICATED.

Gentlemen—It is due you to say that I think I am entirely well of eczema after having taken Swift's Specific. I have been troubled with it very little in my face since last spring. At the beginning of cold weather this fall it made a slight appearance, but went away and has never returned. S. S. S. no doubt broke it up, at least it put my system in good condition and I got well. It also benefited my wife greatly in case of sick headache, and made a perfect cure of a breaking out on my little three year old daughter last summer.

The Witnesses of To-Day.

We take pleasure in presenting to the readers of the Constitution the testimony of the following persons. We do not believe that any other medicine can bring forth indorsements of so high a character.

Mr. J. L. Burch, whose little daughter was relieved, is the well known and popular drummer for that excellent house, S. C. Dobbs, Athens, Ga.

Mrs. Fannie E. James is well known in Richmond county, and her case has been regarded as almost hopeless.

Mr. D. R. Mosely is an old merchant, but now retired to his farm, and known to the business community of North-East Ga. as one of the most reliable of men.

Dr. H. C. Edmunds, the druggist of Elberton, Ga., has a reputation second to none as a physician and citizen in all the land. The "Knights of the Grip" hold him in high esteem, as "mine host," and never fail to have a good word for him,

Mr. R. L. Lewis, a well known educator in South Carolina, and who is now postmaster at Central, in that state, makes a remarkable statement as to his cure, His well known integrity gives it weight and influence wherever he is known.

Rev. R. M Pickens is the popular President of the Methodist Protestant conference of South Carolina—a man of learning and Christian character, which wins the confidence and admiration of all who come within the scope of his influence, Athens, Ga., June 16, 1885.—The S. S. Company—Dear Sirs: My little daughter, at the age of five years, was afflicted with a very painful and disfiguring eruption on her face that baffled the skill of the physicians. I gave her Swift's Specific, and less than one bottle cured the disease entirely. Yours, etc., J. L. BURCH.

From a Grateful Heart.

Early in October, 1884, I was taken with inflammatory rheumatism, so that I was confined to my bed, and could not even move the toes on one of my feet. I could not bear to have my clothes changed or to be handled in anywise. With all the remedies administered, I found no relief. A friend seeing the advertisement of S. S. S. as a rheumatic cure, secured some for me. This was in February, 1885, and after taking six small bottles, I noticed a change in the feeling of the limbs, and could turn over in bed almost without assistance or pain. After a dozen bottles had been used, I could walk on crutches. I am now able to walk without crutches, and do the cooking for a family of four and nearly all the housework.

MRS. FANNIE E. JAMES.

Hephzebiah, Richmond County, Ga., June 21, 1886.

A Postmaster's Statement.

About three years ago, there came upon me a feeling of general debility, accompanied with loss of appetite and energy. Eventually rheumatism attacked me in my shoulders and arms, which so disabled me that I could not dress myself. Finally I had to give up my school. I was then engaged in teaching. The physicians tried various prescriptions, but failed to bring me relief. In fact, some of them seemed to be at a loss to make a diagnosis of my case. The disease finally settled in my right hip and leg, and produced lumps under the skin and swelling of the limb, especially at the ankle, that I could not rest at night or walk except with a crutch Previously I had been a man of fine phsique and strong constitution. Various remedies were tried, but no permanent relief followed and they were abandoned. Seeing a certificate of a case similar to mine that had been cured by Swift's Specific, I concluded to try it. I commenced to improve on the first bottle. Have taken of the large and small, twelve bottles, and am glad to say that I have been entirely relieved, and have not any symptom of the disease for more than twelve months. I recommend Swift's Specific to all my friends.

R. L. LEWIS.

Only One of a Thousand.

NICHOLSON, Ga., June 15, 1886.—The Swift Specific Company—Gentlemen: About twenty-three years ago an itching sore appeared on my left leg, which eventually covered almost the entire surface from the knee to the ankle. The discharge of bloody water was continual, and I suffered the most intense pain for many years. I could not sleep scarcely at night and a greater portion of the time I could not walk except on crutches. In turn I used about all the salves, ointments, sarsaparillas and blood purifiers that I could hear of, and was treated by a number of physicians without obtaining relief. A passing commercial traveler advised me to try Swift's Specific. I finally did so. I have used only half dozen bottles, and my leg is sound again, and there is scarcely any sign of my terrible and long protracted affliction left. I can walk as well as ever, without the use of a cane even, and occasionally spend a day in plowing. My neighbors all knew of my affliction, and will join me in bearing witness to the great cure wrought by S. S. S. D. R. MOSELY.

A Well Known Physician.

ELBERTON, GA., June 16th, 1886.

The Swift Specific Co.—Gentlemen: During the year 1876 I was attacked with articular rheumatism—the effect of exposure to dampness and night air. I exhausted all the remedies known to our profession, including iodide of potash in various combinations, wine of colchicum, fluid extract of poke root, and various other preparations, including a patent potash preparation. I was also treated for several years by a number of our best physicians, but obtained no permanent relief. For nearly a year I was confined almost continuously to my bed, and could not attend to business of any kind Being a practicing physician, I was somewhat prejudiced against patent medicines; but coming in contact with traveling salesmen almost every day, who with one accord recommended the S. S. S. to me, I finally concluded to try it. I commenced improving while using the first bottle, and when I had finished half dozen bottles, I was so much improved that I was able to walk about and attend to my business once more. I consider your Swift Specific the best tonic and alterative made, and I do not hesitate to prescribe it in all cases requiring a reliable blood purifier. Very truly yours.

H. C. EDMONDS, M.D.

From President Pickens.

GREENVILLE, S. C., June 21st, 1886.—Swift Specific Co.: Dear Sirs—About four years ago I was attacked with what the physicians pronounced Neuralgic Rheumatism, accompanied with erysipelas. My appetite failed me entirely, and I had an intermitting pulse and very irregular pulsations of the heart. A terrible pain soon came into my chest and shoulders, and I became so helpless that I could attend to no business at all. The pains were movable and would sometimes pass from one part of my body to another. Finally, the erysipelas broke out on my left hand and arm and produced much swelling. I was for eighteen months afflicted in this way, and of course used a great many kinds of medicine but nothing gave me relief. Friends finally persuaded me to try Swift's Specific, which I did. I noticed a decided improvement while taking the first bottle. I continued its use until I had taken about one dozen bottles, when I found myself entirely recovered and no sign of the disease left except a stiffness in my hand, resulting from the erysipelas. While taking the medicine I gained on an average, two pounds of flesh per week. I think your S. S. S. a valuable medicine, and I frequently recommend it to the afflicted. Very truly yours, R. M. PICKENS.

SHAKING AND QUAKING.

AN ATLANTA MAN IN A BAPTISM OF FIRE.

Graphic Description of the Volcanoes and Earthquakes in New Zealand by an Eye-Witness—Cataracts of Flame and Showers of Hot Sand—Vomited Into the Ocean.

AUCKLAND, New Zealand, June 21.—[Special.]—This place is 170 miles distant from the Lake district, the scene of the recent volcanoes and earthquakes, but the convulsion made itself felt here.

We could see the flashes in the heavens, hear the thunderous explosions and feel the shocks. The volcanic district contains within a space twenty miles long and twelve wide, not less than sixty-three separate points of eruption rising from three to nine hundred feet in height.

HERE AT AUCKLAND,

at an early hour on Thursday morning a noise, as of the firing of cannon, was heard by many residents. From the continuousness of the firing, the loudness of the reports, and the apparent occasional sound resembling salvoes of artillery, many people both here and at Onehunga were under the impression that a man-of-war, probably the Russian Vestnik, had run ashore on the Manukau bar, and that these were her signals of distress. Vivid flashes, as from the firing of guns, were also witnessed both at Onehunga, and also from the cupola of the Herald office, which served to almost confirm the impression that there had been a marine disaster. About 8:30 a. m., however, it began to be circulated about town that a catastrophe, far surpassing in horror even the most terrible of shipwrecks, had taken place; that a great volcanic upheaval had occurred in the Lake district, the whole country between Tauranga and Taupo being involved in the danger, and that a loss of life, all the more terrible in that its extent was unknown, had occurred, and that all the surviving inhabitants were fleeing for Tauranga. There was at once a rush for the Herald publishing office, and throughout the day the office and the street in its vicinity were crowded with people anxiously awaiting the receipt of the successive telegrams which arrived from the seat of the disaster. Never even during the sharpest crises of the war was a deeper interest manifested. Tens of thousands of copies of extras, issued on receipt of each fresh telegram from Rotorua, were eagerly contested for by an excited crowd of numbers of individuals.

A NIGHT OF HORROR.

Our first report came from Tauranga. Every man, woman and child thought their end had come. The sensation was fearful and indescribable. It commenced about one o'clock in the morning by several small shocks of earthquake. The vibrations were strong and frequent. The windows in the houses rattled violently, the feeling being similar to that on board of a vessel in a storm. When the vibrations of the earth were felt, people got up out of their beds, thinking a spring of some sort had broken out close to their dwellings, and after moving about outside to discover the cause, it became clear that some wonderful elements were unusually disturbed. People were running about frantic, when all at once which was accepted at first as that of an earthquake, and a glare appeared on the horizon as that of fire. The scene was grand, but awful, towards Rotomahana. The flames were distinct, with huge volumes of smoke, with sparks of electricity illuminating the whole sky, and appeared as if were chasing one another. When this was at first seen by those who were outside, they rushed about calling people up, when males and females of all ages left their homes, and a general rush made for Ngongotaha mountain for safety. Many of them left their houses in their night dresses and shawls round them only, carrying their babies and young children, running with one aim to flee from this devouring element, which was expected every moment to so great was the terror of the people. This was about two a. m. The night was wet and dark, and the road in a muddy state. On reaching the school, which is on the road, as the people were betaking themselves to the Ngongotaha mountain, Major Clarke was on the wayside, and advised the women to go inside, and take shelter, as they were likely to be as safe inside as in any part they might reach. Many of them accepted the invitation, and were made very comfortable by Mrs. Clarke and family, but others refused, and hasted to get as far away as possible. Some are supposed to have gone on intending to reach Tauranga or Cambridge. On the approach of daylight the vibrations lessened, but have by no means ceased, and many who had gone about seven miles returned about four o'clock.

A GREAT ROAR WAS HEARD,

WHAT THE NATIVES THINK.

The natives account for the catastrophe as being the work of evil spirits. A wizard (fortunately the only living descendant of Ngatarorangi), whose name is Tuhotu, has been accused of having killed, by magical arts, a large number of the Tuhourangji tribe within the last six months. About two months ago a chief named Aporo felt unwell, and immediately accused Tuhotu of witchcraft. Tuhotu did not deny it, whereupon Aporo seized the old man, and would have killed him had he not been rescued by the people. Tuhotu then told the people that Aporo would die. Aporo died within three days. Tuhotu then said he was not satisfied; that from the time of his ancestors no person had ever dared to touch their sacred persons, and that the family had been lifted up with pride through sums of money received from the Europeans, and to lower their pride he would destroy their means of living. This has been accomplished. The natives say: "Your wise men foretell winds, rain and eclipses—why did they not tell us of it? Is there anything in it?"

The Herald has a report from an exploring party, from which I clip the following extract:

Dr. Hecker's party of three followed us shortly after. When we had gone about half a mile the Maori became alarmed and wished to turn back. Mr. Barton, who spoke Maori, took him in hand and persuaded him to come on. At intervals along the journey this scene had to be re-enacted, until we reached a very high and steep hill, almost perpendicular, immediately above what once was Rotomahana lake, but which is now an immense basin, studded with hundreds of small volcanic cones, geysers, fumaroles and ngawhas.

A REGULAR WITCHES' CAULDRON, awful and terrible. The Maori gave one glance at the scene below, ejaculated, "Oh got!" and turned tail for home, cutting all the corners off our trail, and making a bee-line for the horses. From the point at which our party was standing we enjoyed a good view of Tarawera mountain, Rotomahana, and the line of volcanoes between Rotomahana and Okaro lake. One of these was throwing up black mud to a great height. It was forming a high bank of mud on the western side of its crater. An immense body of steam was rolling out of a large circular hole, some two or three chains in diameter. Other volcanoes were throwing out what seemed like a mixture of steam and smoke, but no lava was proceeding from any of them. Low down on the Tarawera mountain, across the lake, a crater was still smoking, and from its lower lip there was a large fissure, through which Rotomahana lake had evidently burst into the volcano. By this means and immense amount of steam had doubtless been generated, and the explosion which blew the bottom and sides out of the lake, leaving it an almost dry basin, had followed. We observed several other craters on the Tarawera mountain still smoking, and in the one opposite to us we noticed a large deposit of pure sulphur. The Herald artist (Mr. Blomfield) wished to so as to be able to take sketches, and I offered to accompany him, being desirous of ascertaining for myself whether the Terraces had been destroyed, because the view obtainable from the top of the upper hill, the nearest point to which anyone had penetrated, was always more or less obscured from the steam rising from the basin. From the top of the hill above mentioned the ground sloped almost perpendicularly, and Mr. Blomfield and myself went down the first half of the hill in grand style, without realizing the difference between going down and climbing back up again. However, we had this brought forcibly to our minds very soon afterwards. We landed on a small terrace, and then the descent of another hill, not so steep, landed us on a small mud flat which lay between the foot of the hill we had come down and the edge of the crater—that is, of the place where Lake Rotomahana once was. We walked to within five feet of

and looked over, and saw a sight which I don't think either of us will ever forget. The wind blowing from the north lifted the steam and disclosed the dry bed of Rotomahana, which is now one scene of volcanic action, impossible for words to describd, but of which Mr. Blomfield's able pencil will, no doubt, give some faint idea. The sight itself was too grand for art to reproduce, or for pen to describe. A few pools of dirty boiling water still existed at the western end, and a rather large one at the eastern end. Hundreds of volcanic cones were throwing out steam, and what appeared to be black smoke. Scores of geysers were playing away merrily, throwing water many feet into the air. In one place, a small plateau of mud had been thrown up, and on it was a pool of yellow boiling water, from one end of which a jet of dirty smoke or steam as thick as a man's body was issuing. About one hundred yards from the western end a large volcano, in very violent action, kept up a continual discharge of mud and steam, accompanied by a heavy rumbling, roaring sound. It would be impossible to describe the wonders of the scene in their infinite variety of volcanic grandeur. We were then standing on the bank above where the Pink Terraces formerly existed. The whole southern bank of the lake and the spot where the Terraces once stood is now an open gap. We then walked round the crater to the western end of the lake, to try to obtain a view of the White Terraces. We waited till the steam lifted, and then saw that the White Terraces were also gone. The appearance of the place where they had stood was entirely changed, but a very active geyser was still playing. We then went back to where we first came down to the crater's edge, and Mr. Blomfield took a sketch of the scene before us. We then started on the return climb—a very different thing from the descent. After a long pull, we got onto the first terrace, and then began the ascent of the big hill. We crawled up its steep face, digging our hands and knees into the soft mud of which it is composed. I never had such a hot half hour's work in my life—in fact, as the French say, we had a bad quarter of an hour.

HAS BEEN BLOWN COMPLETELY AWAY,"

SOME OF THE RESULTS.

You have learned by telegraph of the frightful destruction of life and property.

Fully three hundred people were killed, most of them smothered in hot sand or scalded by the boiling mud which fell over an era of one hundred miles. Thousands of cattle perished. Every green thing in the shape of trees, crops and vegetation was destroyed.

The shocks and eruptions continued for a week. The entire face of the country has been changed, and it will be a long time before the people get over their fright.

To me the whole thing was a tremendous revelation. Right here in the city of Auckland there is an extinct volcanic crater. Heretofore we have felt safe, but now we know not what a day may bring forth. I find my thoughts frequently dwelling upon Atlanta and my few old friends who are still living there. Nothing would delight me more than to pay a short visit to my old home, but I do not see my way clear to making the trip.

SAM'L W. GOODE, AGENT, N. R. FOWLER, auctioneer.—Valuable farm and mill property, known as "Mason's Mill," DeKalb county, Ga., at auction at the courthouse in Decatur, Ga., on Saturday, July 31st, 1886, at 12 o'clock, noon. This property is located about 2 miles north of Decatur, and forms a part of land lots 60, 89 and 105, 18th district of said county, containing 165 acres, more or less, 40 acres open, 115 acres timbered, about 12 acres bottom land, cleared, and about 15 uncleared. Two water courses, "Burnt Fork" and Peachtree, 3 tenant houses, school and church at Union Hill, one mile distant. About 100 acres of this property lay on Shallow Ford road, leading to the mill. $10 per acre has been offered for the bottom land lying at head of mill pond. The people of DeKalb are well informed as to the history and value of this entire property. The mill was built about 30 years ago, and was well and substantially constructed. The millhouse is 2½ stories, and the mill fixtures are of the best quality and in good condition, with two as good mill rocks as can be found anywhere. No inside work is necessary, and when the dam is replaced everything will be in running order and ready for immediate business. The water power is acknowledged to equal anything of the kind in this country. This property is in the hands of a man who will attend to it and run it for what it is worth; will prove a first-class investment. Mrs. Mason cannot handle and give it the necessary attention, therefore has decided to sell it to the best bidder at one-third cash, balance 6 and 12 months, with 8 per cent on notes. Parties in the city wishing to attend the sale can go down at 8 a. m., returning at 1 p. m. A careful survey of this tract of land has been made by Captain Guess, county surveyor, and his plat of same can be seen at my office. Sam'l W. Goode, Agent, No. 1 Marietta st.

THE oleomargarine bill bids far to pass the senate. It is rumored that the president will veto the measure.

SENATORS LOGAN and Edmunds indulged in a little quarrel recently as to which was the greatest city—Chicago or Burlington, Vt.

THE prosecution in the anarchists' trial at Chicago were dumbfounded at the evidence of a witness they introduced. The Bohemian was asked to step down.

Carlton's Victory.

The result of the vote in Wilkes county assures the nomination of Hon. Henry Carlton for congress from the eighth district. With Elbert and Franklin counties, which also instructed for him yesterday, it gives him twenty-six of the forty-one votes of the district convention which meets on Tuesday next in Athens. The five votes of Oglethorpe county are contested, and Mr. Reese enters the convention with fifteen votes. As all the counties in the district have acted there can be no further doubt as to the result.

The victory of Dr. Carlton is a brilliant one, and is as great, in its way, as is that of General Gordon. He entered the contest long after the lines of his opponent had been established, and by the undaunted courage of his charge, has succeeded in winning a victory where many of his most earnest friends advised him that, under the circumstances, there could be nothing else but defeat.

Dr. Carlton has made a highly creditable record as a state legislator, and as president of the last senate proved one of the most faithful, useful and popular members of that body.

In congress he will prove a worthy representative of his district and his state.

Memories of Old Georgia.

THE CONSTITUTION feels somewhat embarrassed in announcing that Colonel Richard Malcolm Johnston has consented to give one of his inimitable readings in Atlanta next Tuesday night, and the embarrassment springs from a fear that a great many people of taste and culture may regard what we have to say of his entertainment as in the nature of a perfunctory puff, or as the result of a desire to do a friendly turn to an old citizen of the state.

We are sure, however, that every individual in the audience that was fortunate enough to hear Colonel Johnston's reading in West End last Tuesday night, will acquit us of both perfunctory puffery and perfunctory hospitality, so to speak, when we say that the entertainment there given was one of the most enjoyable that has ever been given in Atlanta or in the neighborhood of Atlanta, the only drawback being that the programme was somewhat too short. It was not only a rare intellectual treat, but the matter and manner of the reader were so simple—so true to human nature—that two little twelve year old boys in the audience were as highly entertained as their elders. It was, in short, an entertainment calculated to charm the most fastidious literary critic by its artistic form, and to give even the most inexperienced interpretations of human nature which they could recognize and appreciate.

There are other features of Colonel Johnston's reading that commend it to those who have knowledge of the unique characteristics of provincial life in Georgia. These are its historical value as a collection of social studies; its inimitable reproduction of phrases of life and character with which every Georgian is more of less acquainted; its pathos; its humor; its quaint suggestion of the puritanical morality that was and is the basis of country home life in Georgia.

We trust—not for the sake of Colonel Johnston, but for the sake of those in Atlanta who are capable of appreciating an entainment at once humorous and refined—that a large audience will gather to enjoy the reading. For many it will be an event, and the remembrance of it will be a delight to all who attend.

Pig Iron and Prosperity.

The rapid progress of the pig iron industry in northern Alabama and southern Tennessee is one of the wonders of this generation. The building up of this industry at a time when stagnation rules in the iron regions of Pennsylvania and Ohio is significant.

It should be borne in mind that the southern boom flourishes under the most unfavorable conditions. For some time the prices of iron have been abnormally low, so low that even northern furnace owners complain that they have little or no margin for profit. Under these conditions the claim that pig iron can be produced in Alabama at a cost of not more than ten dollars a ton has driven the iron men wild. It is easy to predict the result. The new industry has within ten years increased its output nearly 1,000 per cent. Foreign and northern capitalists are putting their money into it, millions of dollars at a time.

Against such competition Pennsylvania and Ohio cannot stand, and they will not attempt to fight the inevitable. The headquarters of the iron industry will simply shift from the north to the south. The man who sees in this remarkable change nothing more than a local benefit for Alabama and Tennessee is short sighted. It is the beginning of a manufacturing era. The building up of manufacturing cities and towns means new markets, and these will make diversified farming as profitable here as it has been in the thickly settled regions of the middle states. Thus pig iron will be linked with our prosperity. King Pig Iron does not sound as well as King Cotton, but he will make a solid old monarch. There is room in the south for the two kings and we hope to see a nip and tuck race between them.

Free Trade Between the States.

The Boston Herald says that "THE ATLANTA CONSTITUTION is doing its best to build up a high tariff party in the south," but suggests that we want free trade in Georgia granite, so far as Ohio is concerned. This is very true. Free trade between the states is the settled policy of the government, just as protection to American industries has been the settled policy of the government since its foundation.

We will state, however, for the benefit of our Boston contemporary, that free trade between the states has built up some sections of the country at the expense of others. The agricultural states of the west and south have, through this policy, been paying tribute to the north and east for years, and they will continue to pay tribute until, by the development of their material resources and the building up of industrial enterprises, they are enabled to compete with the more fortunate sections.

For years and years the north and east have been built up at the expense of the south and west. This is the result partly of free trade between the states and partly of the energy of the representatives of those sections in securing government appropriations. It was the boast of Mr. Toombs that, while in congress, he had never lifted his finger to secure an appropriation for the commercial benefit of his section. It is the boast of northern and eastern statesmen that they have never lost an opportunity of securing appropriations.

Now that the industrial enterprises of New England have been built up by protection, it is not surprising that some of her organs are in favor of free trade; for New England would rather compete with Europe than with the south; and if protection continues to be the policy of the government, that section will have to compete with the south to a certainty.

As to the war tariff, that is another matter. We are in favor of revising that tariff to a point where it can be made permanent—to a point where it will act as a balance between home production and foreign competition, with the scales always in favor of home production.

Sensible and Satisfactory.

Our dispatches give a graphic description of a typical French duel.

Last Thursday General Boulanger, minister of war, went before the senate and justified the expulsion of the Duke D'Aumale. Baron de Lareinty replied that the expulsion was a cowardly act, and expressed regret that General Boulanger had insulted an absent man. For this language the baron was challenged.

The arrangements for the duel were conducted with the utmost publicity. It was the talk of the hour and the papers were full of it. The affair was booked for last Friday, but at the urgent request of the president of the senate, who doubtless desired to be present as a spectator, it was postponed until the following day.

It seems that the combatants faced each other with true Parisian courtesy and coolness, Boulanger calmly awaited the result of the baron's shot, and finding himself uninjured, fired his weapon in the air. On his return to the city he received an enthusiastic ovation.

It is to be presumed that the numerous spectators of the duel and those who took a lively interest in it are firmly convinced that it was the only satisfactory way of adjusting the difficulty. De Lareinty has made ample amends for his insulting language, and it is clearly demonstrated that the expulsion of the Duke D'Aumale was not a cowardly act. Just how the waste of a little powder and lead, coupled with some very bad marksmanship, establishes these conclusions it would be difficult to explain.

To the French this business is the very romance of heroism; to us it appears unutterably silly. Just fancy one of our cabinet officers going out to fight a duel with a senator, and fixing the time to suit the convenience of the president of the senate!

MR. B. H. RICHARDSON, of the Savannah Daily Times, passed through the city the other day on his way to Montgomery. He will pass back again shortly, for he is not the man to miss many clam chowders.

A YOUNG Oswego barber named George W. White arrived in Buffalo Thursday with a view, as he states, of running the Niagara rapids in a cork jacket of peculiar construction, which he has with him. Soon after his arrival he walked down to the river in his cork jacket, followed by a large crowd, who told him he was a candidate for the other world if he tried to go through the rapids in that rig. He asserted that he was not afraid, as he had tried the jackets before and was an experienced swimmer in rough water. After a survey of the rapids he decided to postpone the feat till he could learn more about the currents and sunken rocks. People who talked with him do not believe that he will risk the attempt, but it is possible that he may do so if not prevented by the authorities.

IN our book notices, the other day, several books sent for review were acknowledged as coming through the firm of J. J. Richards & Son. There is no such firm. S. P. Richards & Son were entitled to the credit.

TIMES are changing. A resolution in favor of protection to home industries and a silver currency was introduced in the district convention at Savannah the other day, and it didn't kick up much of a fuss either. If there were any free traders around they were afraid to tackle it.

HOME, the spiritualist whose death occurred recently, was a very remarkable man. During his long public career he counted among his friends Mary Howitt, Mrs. S. C. Hall, the father of the present earl of Dunraven, Mrs. Browning, and many other people well known in both hemispheres; and in his personal relations he was highly esteemed by his friends. It has been again and again affirmed of Mr. Home, by witnesses of unimpeached character, that they have seen him plunge his hands with impunity into a blazing coal fire and take up the glowing embers like so many strawberries, seat himself upon heavy mahogany dining-tables and rise with them several feet into the air, and after floating horizontally head foremost out of windows at a height many yards from the ground, sail tranquilly around a castle tower and come in again unharmed at the other side. The late earl of Dunraven among others, recorded feats like these having been accomplished by Mr. Home in his presence in broad daylight. The manifestations said to have attended Mr. Home throughout his career included—besides those mentioned and the ordinary rapping, table-tipping, writing and the playing upon musical instruments—visions seen by himself, appearance of hands, arms and spirit forms seen by other persons and the elongation and shortening of his body. He claimed to have performed remarkable cures, and to have been protected often from sudden danger by spirits.

THE Boston Advertiser has evidently been reading and believing Brtoher Cable. It says the death rate of the Georgia convicts is "higher than that of an army in active warfare." The truth is that the death rate is considerably lower than that of the Massachusetts prisons.

SIXTEEN years ago, in a quiet English town, not far from London, little Johnny Hillard, aged 8, took a fancy to little Mary Ann Boyle, aged 6. Whenever there was a children's party in their neighborhood Mary Ann was obliged to pay large forfeits in kisses to Johnny, who, in return, gave her a large share of his cakes and candies. Mary Ann played with no other boy when Johnny was around. Johnny's parents emigrated to America and took him with them. For a number of days Mary Ann cried for her little boy lover, Johnny. But she did not cease to remember him even after she had stopped crying for him. Johnny's parents settled in Hartford, Connecticut. Here he grew up into a strong, hearty, fine-looking young man. He went into business and did well, and finally found himself in position to support a wife. Every now and then John Hillard had been thinking of the pretty child sweetheart whom he had left years ago in England. About a year ago, although John had heard nothing of Mary Ann for nearly fifteen years, he decided to write to her. She answered him. They kept up a regular correspondence and finally exchanged pictures. Soon afterward John invited Mary Ann to come over to America and marry him. She answered that she didn't care if she did, and, straightway packing up her goods, she emigrated to America. They have been married, and are happy.

THE new Scribner's Magazine is gradually taking shape. It will be backed by an abundance of capital and the best business and editorial management.

THE SOUTHERN EVANGELIST for July is just out, and may be found at the news stands. This number presents an exceptionally striking and varied table of contents. Six pages are devoted to the sermons, scenes and incidents of the great Indianapolis meetings conducted by Sam Jones and Sam Small. The ringing prohibition speeches of the two Sams, near Boston, Mass., are especially notable, and should be read by all. Sam Small's sermon on "The Lord's Prayer" and the report of Sam Jones's work at St. Paul will attract attention. The other contents embrace timely paragraphs, Senator Colquitt's letter on local option in congress, editorials, stories, poems, prohibition news, religious intelligence, a history of Atlanta's first three days under prohibition, and miscellaneous articles. The Southern Evangelist is sold at five cents a copy. Yearly subscription fifty cents. Published by W. A. Hemphill, Atlanta, Ga.

THE Boston Herald has a very fine article on "The Law of Trade." It thinks, because Georgia wants to sell a few blocks of granite to Ohio, that the customhouse should be torn down and the industries of the country destroyed by throwing them open to competition with foreign labor. As a New England argument, this would pass muster in a college, but not elsewhere.

MISS MAT CRIM, a young Atlanta girl, who has been contributing to the Century Magazine, is the subject of an appreciative notice in the Indianapolis Journal. Miss Crim has a future before her.

PERSONS AND THINGS.

THE editor of the Lynn Union, who has probably suffered and is a living example whereof he speaks, says: "You can whip anything out of a child but badness, and whip anything into it but goodness."

MISS ANNIE PIXLEY, whose name hitherto has been associated with "M'liss" and pieces of that stamp, will devote all her time next season to a new domestic comedy called "The Deacon's Daughter," so the papers now say.

HORATIO SEYMOUR'S monument, just completed in Forest Hill cemetery, Utica, consists of a great boulder which the ex-governor himself selected for the purpose. It has been carved into the form of a sarcophagus.

MR. THOMAS W. KEENE will appear next season in "Richard III," "Hamlet," "Macbeth," "Othello," "Julius Cæsar," "The Fools Revenge," "Richelieu," "The Merchant of Venice," "The Wife," "Romeo and Juliet," and "The Lady of Lyons."

SECRETARY MANNING will go to Saratoga next week, and afterward will visit Lake George.

BEN BUTLER has had his famous yacht, America, remodeled, and she is expected to prove a fast boat.

BURDETTE: A man had much rather be fined $50 for fast driving than be told that his horse couldn't trot fast enough to break the statute.

MRS. GLADSTONE darns all the premier's socks and his daughter attends to the grand old man's neckties.

THE late Resolved Waterman, one of the most esteemed citizens of Providence, R. I., outlived his two wives and twelve children, and died at the age of ninety-nine years, leaving behind him only one daughter and four grandchildren.

THE boycott has been carried into Africa. The natives at Cameroons have refused to trade with the whites or supply them with any food. No white man can buy a fowl or a bullock, and the natives have barred the way to the fresh water, so that the whites have to depend upon rain for all the water they require. Large numbers of the factories up the river are closed, and the traders are sending their working staffs home.

THE project to remove the bones of Pero Maroncelli, the Italian patriot, who died in New York forty years ago, to his native town in Italy, is likely to fail by Italian red tape. A letter was sent to the office of the board of health by the Italian consul-general, Giovanni Raffo, recently, stating that before the patriot's remains could be permitted to enter the Italian kingdom an official certificate that no contagious disease prevailed in this city in August, 1846, would have to be presented. Dr. John T. Nagle wrote a reply that it would not be possible to furnish such a certificate, because smallpox, typhus fever, scarlet fever, and whooping-cough prevailed in the city at that time.

ECHOES FROM THE PEOPLE.

Brandied Fruit.

J. T. H., Auburn, Ala: Please give me a receipe for making brandy peaches and pears.

Take four pounds of fruit, four pounds of sugar and one pint best brandy, make a syrup of the sugar, and water enough to dissolve it. Let this come to a boil, put the fruit in and boil five minutes. Having removed the fruit carefully, let the syrup boil fifteen minutes longer, or until it thickens well. Add the brandy, take the kettle at once from the fire. Pour the hot syrup over the fruit and seal it up. If after the fruit is taken from the fire, a reddish liquor oozes from it, drain this off before adding the clear syrup. Peaches and pears should be peeled for brandying.

The Great Sphinx.

Subscriber, Sara Sota, Fla: When was the great Sphinx constructed, and what are its dimensions?

It is now believed that it was sculptured before the time of Cheops, the builder of the first pyramid. It is near the eastern edge of the platform on which the Pyramids stand, with its head turned towards the Nile. The head measures twenty-eight feet six inches from the top to the chin. The total length of the body, which is that of a lion crouching close to the ground, is 146 feet. Across the shoulders it measures thirty-six feet, and the paws extended about fifty feet. Between the paws there was built a small temple, which was of masonry, as was the paws, while all the rest of the Sphinx seems to be carved out of solid rock. Colonel Vyre drilled a hole twenty-seven feet deep into one of the shoulders, and found that it was one piece of stone throughout.

Ike, the Bore.

We are out in the country for a couple of weeks, and are perfectly happy amid the sweet smell of the verdant woods, and the soft breeze that fans our cheeks and drives away the heated, flushed feeling contracted in the dusty, close city.

At morning's break, together with a bevy of merry children, we seek pleasure in roaming through the dewy fields, plucking ripe, luscious blackberries, and astonishing the visitors with bucketfulls of the sweet fruit.

There are other guests here, and among them a young mother, with a bright-eyed, romp of a girl, full of frolic and mischief, and constantly keeping her mother in a stir of excitement for fear some harm will befall the pet. Among the inmates of the hospitable farm house is a young man about nineteen years of age, holding that position commonly called "hired man."

He is called Ike, and is the idol of the little girl we have mentioned, as well as the pest of her mother, who can scarcely bear his presence, and always speaks of him as the bore.

We invariably have his company in our roams, for he knows every foot of the woods, and is indispensable as a guide.

We went for a long walk this evening, and, laughingly happy, wandered around until darkness began to fall. Unknowingly we had gone farther than usual, and did not realize our position until it was almost time for the light of heaven to peep forth from the myriad windows that deck the blue firmament.

Then we began hastily retracing our steps. Scarcely had we traversed ten feet, however, before the mother suddenly stopped and exclaimed:

"Where is my child?"

Instantly we discovered that she was missing, and not only that, but the alarming fact that Ike was also missing.

"My God!" shrieked the mother, in agony, "that wretch has stolen my baby! Oh, my poor darling, where are you?"

Nothing could be said to comfort her, and the woods rang with her heart-broken cries and sobs.

Several tried to carry her home, while we began a search for the missing couple, but of no avail.

She would be one of the party. Torches were lighted, and the party of pleasure seekers now turned into an anxious crowd of hunters.

Far into the night we searched as never was searched before, and at last, worn and weary, turned our steps homeward.

In order to travel more rapidly and easier we reached the highway, and sadly tramped along, supporting the almost distracted mother among us. Silently, almost half of the distance had been retraced, when suddenly the foremost of our party halted, and raised his hand.

Instantly all were breathless. For a moment nothing was heard, save the low moanings of night winds as they swept through the branches of lovely pines. Then we all faintly heard the low sobs of a child, half crying, and half talking:

"Wa' tup, Unk Ike, an' ess do home; I sho sheepy."

With a glad cry the mother sprang forward, and in a moment was pressing her child to her breast, while she cried:

"Men, arrest that villian. I always, from the first, knew he was a scoundrel, and he shall suffer severely for this outrage."

"Hold on a minute," said one of the men, "I'm afraid he's already done for."

He flashed the bright light of his flaming torch over the boy's body, and disclosed the fact that he was either dead, or dangerously wounded, by a severe blow on the head. They carefully raised him up, and two stout men began the laborious task of transporting him to the house, between them.

"Hold on!" suddenly cried one of the party who had been occupied in searching around the spot, "here's another man." And sure enough there lay a ruffianly looking negro, terribly torn about the face and neck, and insensible. He had evidently dragged himself off and attempted to hide before he fell. In an hour both of the wounded were properly cared for, and had almost regained their senses.

Then came a startling disclosure. During the evening the child had wandered from the crowd, and noticing her absence, Ike began looking for her, without informing the party, for fear of alarming the mother.

After nearly an hour's search, he discovered her in the arms of the negro, and at once began pursuit.

Burdened with the child the abductor was easily overtaken, and turned firmly upon the boy, who fought desperately and bravely for the rescue.

He managed to strike the negro a heavy blow on the head with a rock, and sprang at his throat, clawing and biting like a tiger. In falling the negro seized a heavy stick, and bringing it heavily across the head of Ike, felled him senseless. Then, almost overcome with weakness, he sought refuge in the bushes. Here they remained, until our party heard the plaintive cry: "Wa' tup unk Ite."

"FITZGOOBER."

THE MOTHER HEN'S FIGHT.

A Terrific Contest on Nearly Even Terms.

From the New York Times.

A member of the New York canoe club, on a cruise, paddled up to old "Unc' Rufe" Thompson's cabin, in the low ground, about two miles below Port Richmond, Staten island, on Saturday, and asked for a drink of water. Uncle Rufe untwisted his rheumatic legs from the rounds of a rickety chair, craned his perspiring black neck around the jamb of the front door, and shouted, "You, 'Rindyann!"

"I'se heah, Rufe," returned a big, fat, able bodied voice in the interior of the cabin.

"Bring de gem' a drink of wattah—in de chaney mug."

"Heah yo is, sah—fine day, sah." The drink of water, the china mug, and old Aunt Lorinda Ann Thompson came to the door together. Aunt Lorinda stood in the doorway long enough to say that she was "right poo'ly," and then went back to her dishes, leaving Uncle Rufe and his visitor to discuss the eel fishing at their ease.

At the end of half an hour a great commotion arose among the chickens at the south end of the cabin. "You, Rufe!" shouted Lorinda Ann, with startling force, "see what's de matter with dem yar fowls."

The old man hobbled off toward the creek, his visitor strolling indolently after him.

"Hi, dar, 'Rindy!" bawled Uncle Rufe as he came in sight of the chickens. "Dar's a big wattah snake a-carryan off one dem new chickens!"

A spotted water snake, about four feet long, had swallowed a newly hatched chicken, and was trying to carry off another. The old hen was hopping around the snake and making loud and frequent outcry. Part of her little brood had clustered about her. The rest had taken refuge with some old chickens near the cabin.

"Whar's he—whar's dat snake?" screamed Aunt Lotinda as she rushed down the path, a moving mountain of wrath. She carried a much-worn broom, which she brandished like a Zulu lance. In another moment the snake would have been killed had not the canoest interfered.

"Oh, I say, Aunt Lorinda," he said, catching hold of the broom, "give the snake a chance. Don't you see that it is an even fight?"

Aunt Lorinda stopped and looked doubtfully at the frantic hen.

"Yah, yah!" shouted Uncle Rufe. "Dat's so. Gib de snake a chance. I bet on de ol' hen ebery time. You Jeff!"—to his half-clad son—"go roun' yar an' keep de snake f'm gettin' in de creek. Yah, yah. Dat's it. Go it, ole hen, my money's on you." The old man danced and capered around like a boy, his rheumatism forgotten and his old age thrown aside. Lorinda Ann was doubtful, but she gave the snake a chance.

The hen was a big, dun-colored Brahma, with large feet and a strong beak. The snake was unusually large in girth, with a wicked looking head and a strong tail. He looked as though he could have swallowed the old hen's entire brood without special effort. For a few minutes the old hen acted as though she had gone crazy. She pecked at the snake like a prize fighter in mortal fear of his opponent, and she clawed at him with both feet until she fell over upon her back in helpless confusion. She screamed incessantly, and ever scream was echoed threefold by the old rooster and a drove of hens at the cowshed. The rooster would have joined valiantly in the fight had he not been kept at bay by Jeff and old Rufe.

The snake was game. Apparently realizing that the odds were against him even though he beat off the hen, he summoned himself for a desperate fight. When he found that he could not get away, but must stay in the open ground and fight it out, he dropped the little chicken that he had been holding in his mouth and reared his spotted neck. The chicken in his throat bothered him by its weight, and he swallowed it a few inches further. The act of deglutition was easy. Then the wicked-looking head rose fully eighteen inches above the grass. The forked tongue flashed back and forth like a narrow strip of flame.

"Now, look out, ol' hen!" shouted Uncle Rufe, as the snake made a stroke at the hen's neck. "If he kotches holt o' yer by de neck you're a gone goose. Hi! Dat's it. Gib it to 'im!"

The hen made a dash at the snake, with her wings outstretched and her feathers angrily ruffled. Her sharp beak left a scar on his spotted skin about a foot from his tail. Then for fully a minute the hen and the snake followed each other about in a circle. The hen wanted to grasp the snake by the neck and claw him to pieces, but she was afraid to get into close quarters. She tried it twice, but each time the snake dodged and struck back at her. On the second attack he carried away a mouthful of her tail feathers.

"Kotch 'im by de tail, you ol' fool; kotch 'im by de tail!" the old woman screamed. "Don't yo' see which end am a movin'?" As in obedience to Aunt Lorinda's instructions, the hen made a dash, and when her ruffled feathers had calmed down Uncle Rufe was delighted to find that she had the snake by the tail.

"Dat's de talk," he howled as the hen started to drag the snake toward the cow shed. "Hi, dar! Take kyar!" The snake turned about like a steel spring and threw himself bodily upon the hen. In a moment hen and snake were rolling over the ground, the snake's tail lashing the ground like a flail, and the hen's wings beating about like the paddles of a fanning mill. Uncle Rufe, Aunt Lorinda, Jeff and the canoeist crowded up to watch the fight.

"Hoop! golly!" yelled old Rufe, giving Aunt Lorinda a terrible slap between the shoulders. "De ol' hen's got 'im, I told yo' so! Bully fo' dat ol' hen!"

The hen had the snake by the neck, and with her feet on the writhing body she was trying to tear his head off. The snake made only a feeble show of resistance. He had probably been disabled by blows from the hen's wing. When the snake ceased to struggle the hen dropped him, and little Jeff broke his back in a dozen places with a hoe. The old rooster ran up and crowed defiantly, and the old hen gathered her frightened chickens about her and strutted off to the cowshed.

A CAREFUL FELLOW.

Couldn't Afford to Get Married Because of the Cost Attending the Ceremony.

From the Arkansaw Traveler.

A young man, evidently from a part of the country where the shriek of the railroad engine has never been heard, called on the county clerk the other day, and in a business-like way, asked:

"Fell any yit?"

"What?"

"Marriage license fell any yit?"

"No, same price."

"Well, I come in the other day, an' er feller told me they mought fall airter county court met."

"No, they are the same price."

"I'm mighty sorry uv that, fur I've been engaged to a gal fur about two year. I loves her might'ly, an' she says that she ain't goin' to wait on me no longer, but I wouldn't give $3 fur no set uv license that wuz ever writ out. It's mighty hard to give her up, but I reckon I'll have to let her slide."

"Look here," said the clerk. "Tell you what I'll do for you. I'll pay for your license."

"Much obleeged, cap'n. Jist write 'em out, an' I'll go down an' break the good news to Susan. It'll tickle her mighty nigh to death when she hears uv my good luck."

The license was issued, and the young fellow hurried to the wagon yard, where Susan was stopping, and conducted her to the office of a justice of the peace.

"Cap'n, whu'll you charge to marry us?"

The magistrate told him, and, shaking his head, he mumbled: "Kain't erford to pay that much these hard times."

"Nobody will perform the cercmony any cheaper."

"Wall, then Susan, you'd better go back to the wagon yard, while I go roun' an' see if I can sell the license to some other feller. I hate to give you up, Sue, but I reckon you'd better marry Bill. He's er reckless sort uv feller, and don't mind 'stravigance."

GOUGH'S SUCCESSOR.

Francis Murphy on the True Method of Temperance Reform.

Springfield, O., Special.

"Nobody can keep you from passing a prohibitory law for yourself," was the striking way in which Francis Murphy summed up his creed on the temperance question in a sentence during one of his speeches the other evening.

"Believe me, no moral movement, such as the temperance work, will or can succeed unless it is accomplished by peace and love. 'Peace on earth, good will to men,' should be the motto. What is the use of this temperance work if you go around making everybody mad with it? That is like a wasp. Artemus Ward said that one wasp was sufficient to break up a Methodist campmeeting, and human wasps will always injure any good movement. Believe me, brethren, unless there is peace in a moral movement it is a mistake. Why are those liquor sellers in their shops day after day, selling their poison? It is just because you support 'em. Quit supporting them and they will all quit business. Let us be charitable and kind and loving in this work. The age of hate is gone; this is the age of thought and the age of reason. If you go at people and try to reform 'em, don't go at them with a club. Approach them with love and kindness. I love peace, and good will above everything else. Let us discard every "ism" which has hate for its creed, and which causes us to quit loving one another. Never enter in a crusade of reform in such a way as to make everybody mad."

Who Burned Columbia?

From the New York Herald.

This is a question apparently as perennial as "Who struck Billy Patterson?" The confederates insist that General Sherman's army did it, and General Sherman himself says his men did nothing of the kind. Now comes Captain Ira B. Sampson, Second Massachusetts heavy artillery, and says in the Springfield Republican that just before the approach of Sherman's army he was a prisoner of war at Columbia, South Carolina; that he escaped, was secreted in a barn by a friendly negro, and on the morning of the 17th of February, 1865, saw the following sight:

"It was hardly more than ten o'clock before a body of Wheeler's rebel cavalry issued from the city a quarter of a mile or so distant, surrounding and firing several buildings, including the railroad depot and warehouses adjoining, filled with grain and other stores. These troops then passed across the fields on the outskirts of the city and disappeared. There was no chance of a mistake as to who they were or what their intention was in firing the buildings."

This is a very straight statement, and as General Wheeler is still alive, perhaps he and Captain Sampson might combine to settle the responsibility for an act about the responsibility for which there has been so much doubt.

The Ku-Klux of the North.

From the New York Graphic.

In Westboro', Mass., some young men have been pelting with bad eggs a woman and a man who are believed to have conducted themselves improperly, and the man would have been tarred and feathered likewise had not the fire bells rung and so called the tender vigilantes to sport of another kind. These cases are becoming a little too numerous in the north. We noted recently similar punishment of a women by the woman of a town in Michigan; and in various parts of New England the work of the vigilants—consisting principally of whipping and warning to leave town—goes on with the regularity of that of the regular courts.

His Distress Was Relieved.

From the Chicago News.

"I see a medical journal says that toothache may frequently be cured by placing a silver coin on one side of the gum and a small piece of zinc on the other. It generates an electric current, you know; that stops the pain. By the way, Charlie, could you let me take a silver dollar till I try it on this tooth of mine?"

"Sorry, George, old boy, but fact is I haven't it in silver. Let you have a bill, though, old fellow, if tha'll relieve your pain any."

"Thanks awfully, dear boy; I think that'll help it some."

CONSTITUTIONALS.

Pencil Paragraphs and Editorial Shortstops Caught on the Run.

There are two classes of persons who go to Dade county coal mines—members of the legislature and long-term, able-bodied convicts.

Other people go occasionally, but not often, for the state of Dade is an out-of-the way place, and, besides that, visitors have little business fooling around convict camps.

I went up to Dade the other day to see Colonel Towers, principal keeper of the penitentiary, suppress an insurrection, and when the riot was over, I had spare time enough to take a glance at the coal mine and the arrangements for handling the dusky diamonds.

I must draw on the resources of the composing room to help me in my description of the interesting points about the Dade coal mines. The coal company owns a standard gauge railroad running from Shellmound in Tennessee to the mines, which are in Georgia. The road is not a common carrier but transacts business only for the company. It is six or eight miles in length and runs up a valley. The valley is very narrow and the mountains on each side are about a thousand feet high. To illustrate, the road runs along the bottom of a great big and I do not exaggerate the steepness of the mountain sides by the illustration taken from the typo's case. The country is very wild. The mountains are covered with dense, tangled woods, and deer and turkey abound in the neighborhood. As the train goes from Shellmound to the mines it passes the mouth of the Nickajack cave, which can be plainly seen. The entrance is about one hundred feet across and is a big black hole in the mountain side. A creek coming down the valley enters the mouth of the cave, disappears in the darkness and goes beyond the knowledge of man. On one occasion Colonel J. W. Renfroe, postmaster of Atlanta, rode on horseback nine miles into this cave, but came out ignorant of its size. There is no telling how big it is.

From the railroad the location of the old Castle Rock coal mine can be seen. The track of the inclined plane railroad catches the eye. Two tracks side by side run up the mountain at an angle of about forty-five degrees. When the mine was being worked coal was let down by cars on these tracks, one car to a track, so arranged that the loaded car would pull the empty car to the top of the mountain. The cars were run on the principle of twin well buckets, and made speed that would stagger a cannon ball express. One day Senator Brown and Mrs. Brown went up in one of the cars. The next trip the cable broke and there was not enough of the little cars left to make a decent toothpick.

At the end of the standard gauge road are the coke ovens of the company. The ovens are in the valley and are 286 in number. In them the coal is burned to coke for use in smelting iron from iron ore. To stand on the mountains at night and look down at the coke ovens when they are fired up reminds me of the remark of a man who undertook to describe Pittsburg—

"It looks like h—ll with the lid off."

The coke ovens hold thirty or forty thousand bushels of coal at one time.

The entrance to the Dade coal mine is from the top of a mountain and that mountain like the others, is a thousand feet high. At the top is a broad plateau, two miles across. The company has a forty acre garden up there, and the convicts have all the vegetables they could possibly want. The Dade coal is not let down in the way that was in use at Castle Rock when that mine was being worked. A narrow gauge railroad runs from the coke ovens to the top of the mountain. As the sides of the mountain are almost perpendicular it becomes interesting to know how the trains get up there. It is all very simple when you see it done. The grade of the road is three or four feet to the hundred. The track, starting at the base, runs partly around the mountain, climbing just a little bit. Then a switch is put in and the track goes back toward the starting point, but goes just a little higher up the mountain. This zig-zag, whip-saw business is kept up until the top is reached, and the railroad looks like a big W turned sideways.

To ride on the little train as it climbs the mountain is the next thing to being up in a balloon. The passenger car is about the size of THE CONSTITUTION'S elevator, and it seemed that to sit anywhere except in the middle would turn it over. One looks out of the window and sees that he is sailing along on a level with the opposite ridge. Tall trees below seem like grass and weeds. You feel that a big bird has caught you up and is flying away with you. The only thing to dispel the idea is the clatter-clatter of the little train and the jerking of the miniature car as it is snatched along the track by the stout little engine.

"S-s-s-s-spose!" I asked, "Sp-sp-spose th-th-this the-the-the-thing r-r-runs off!"

"Then its good bye John," was the consoling reply, "but it has never yet jumped the track."

There is a good story told of a certain Dutchman who was a new employe at the mines, and who started up the mountain. Instead of following the path straight up he followed the railroad track. After walking about a mile he came to the switch and turned back. When he had traveled another mile he came opposite the starting point, and was horrified to find he had progressed only about two hundred feet in climbing the mountain. He followed the track faithfully, however, and traveled several miles before he reached his journey's end.

When the top of the mountain is reached one finds the entrance to the coal mine. It looks like a big gopher hole and a little railroad track descends into it at an angle of about thirty degrees. Little coal cars are pulled up this track, which is about 300 feet long, the motive power being a stationary engine which is located near the entrance to the mine, and which winds a cable onto a drum. I went down in the mine. It was dark as Egypt. The mine is about one hundred feet under ground, and consists of a great number of tunnels which cross each other at right angles. The mountain is completely honey-combed. Three or four hundred men work in the mine; three hundred of them being convicts. The men wear small lanterns on their caps and look like so many overgrown lightning bugs when seen in the distance down the dark tunnels. When I reached the foot of the "slope" and found myself in the mine I was accompanied by the engineer, Captain Evans. A tall young man with large handsome eyes and a big brown moustache tipped his cap and bowed gracefully to the captain. By the yellow light which flickered in his cap I saw that he had a very striking face and I was so impressed by his appearance that I asked the captain who the good-looking convict was. He replied:

"His name is Hammond. He came here from Rome, and is in for murder. He tried to escape once and was shot in the back."

The coal miners lie on their sides to pick the coal. A number of mules are kept at work in the mines pulling the little coal cars from different parts of the mine to the slope. A great deal of track is required to get the coal out of the mines, about twenty miles of it being under ground, running through the various tunnels. About six hundred tons of coal are mined every day, but none of it is sold except to the Western and Atlantic railroad. That company takes ten car loads daily. The rest is burnt into coke for the iron furnaces at Rising Fawn and Chattanooga. No one can form an idea of the extent of the Dade county coal mine unless he goes there and sees for himself.

NORWOOD NAMED.

THE FIRST DISTRICT CONVENTION FINISHES ITS WORK.

After One Hundred and Fifty-five Ballots Hon. Thomas M. Norwood is Re-Nominated—General Satisfaction at the Result—The Executive Committee of the District.

SAVANNAH, Ga., July 17.—[Special.]—The nominating convention of the first congressional district brought its labors to a close this evening by nominating Hon. Thomas M. Norwood. The morning's session was spent in the old routine of calling the roll of counties and announcing the vote with monotonous sameness. From the 73d to the 133d ballot the result was the same: Norwood 20, Mershon 16, Bradwell 4. This continued, varied only by speeches of the usual style until about 12 o'clock, when a recess was taken until 4 o'clock.

On re-assembling the same old programme was repeated for a time, but it was evident that the country members were getting tired and determined to bring matters to an issue. This was still more clearly shown when on the 153d ballot Norwood received 22 votes.

This created quite a sensation. When the 153d ballot was ended excitement ran high. On this ballot it stood about the same, but the 155th ballot showed Norwood to have 26 votes, Mershon 2½, Bradwell 11½.

Before the result was announced Mr. Way, of Liberty, arose and said he desired to give the vote of his county to Norwood, thus giving him 28 votes and the nomination. This result was received with loud applause.

Committee of three, Messrs McDonald, of Ware, Way, of Liberty, and Saussy, of Chatham was appointed to inform him of his nomination. They waited on him and escorted him to the hall where he made an eloquent speech, thanking the convention for the honor conferred.

The result gives general satisfaction and the verdict is that the convention could not have acted more wisely.

The chair then announced the following as the democratic committee for the first congressional district:

Appling, E. D. Graham; Bryan, A. Peyton Smith; Bulloch, John P. Moore; Camden, D. L. Clinch; Chatham, J. R. Saussy; Charlton, J. B. Crabtree; Clinch, Jas. P. Mattox; Effingham, S. Pittman; Emanuel, E. W. Lane; Echols, J. P. Prescott; Glynn, E. A. Nedson; Liberty, A. S. Way; McIntosh, Jas. Walker; Pierce, A. N. Smith; Screven, J. C. Dell; Tatnall, C. W. Smith; Ware, John C. McDonald; Wayne, Hiram Bennett.

The following resolution offered by Mr. McDonald, of Ware, was unanimously adopted:

Resolved, that this convention hereby tender its thanks to the chairman for the able and impartial manner in which he has presided over our deliberations; we also tender our thanks to the secretaries for services rendered this body.

The convention then adjourned sine die.

CARLTON CARRIES THREE COUNTIES,

Which Insures His Nomination to Congress from the Eighth District.

WASHINGTON, Ga., July 17.—[Special.]—The congressional campaign which opened in earnest in Wilkes county just one week ago today closed at 6 o'clock this evening, and resulted in a victory for Carlton, which insures his nomination for congress from the eighth congressional district. Both the Reese and the Carlton men have worked the county for all it was worth. This morning about 7 o'clock a stream of wagons and buggies began to pour into town. At 12 o'clock a tap from the courthouse bell announced the convention about to assemble. The echo of the courthouso bell had not died away before six hundred men fairly swarmed into the building.

William Sims, chairman, called the meeting together, and R. T. DuBose introduced a resolution instructing whatsoever delegation that might be elected today to be pledged to vote against the new apportionment recently inaugurated by the executive committee of the eighth congressional district.

A motion to proceed at once to balloting, commencing at 12:30 and closing at six, was carried by a shout.

Two or three hundred men surrounded the courthouse yard during the balloting and yelled for their respective candidates. The gathering was one of the most enthusiastic seen in this place since ante-bellum days. The best of feeling was observed and not a single sign of disturbance showed itself. The eagerness of the crowd is shown from the fact that 400 votes were polled during the first hour the ballot box was open. The Reese men seemed to get hacked early in the ballot. By five o'clock the vote was virtually over with. Six hundred and twenty-two votes were polled—for Carlton 368; for Reese, 254; Carlton's majority 114.

Following are the delegates: R. T. Dubose, H. B. Pope, T. F. Jackson, Simpson Booker, S. A. Wooten, N. H. Pope, W. B. Norman, L. W. Lattimer. The delegates were authorized to appoint their own alternates.

THE VICTOR SPEAKS.

Hon. H. H. Carlton has just arrived here from Elberton, at half past 7 o'clock and spoke to a crowd of two or three hundred. When he drove up to the court house he was taken from the buggy by ten or fifteen men and carried on their shoulders to the courthouse steps from where he spoke. When he was asked how he stood on the tariff he replied that if elected he would be the people's servant and would vote as they wished. The town is wild with shouts for Carlton.

Carlton Carries Elbert and Franklin.

ELBERTON, Ga., July 17.—[Special.]—Carlton carried Elbert today by 297 majority out of a vote of 589.

Franklin also went for Carlton, which gives him a majority of the votes in the district.

STEWART GETS SPALDING.

His Home County Instructs for Him and Passes Complimentary Resolutions.

GRIFFIN, Ga., July 17.—[Special.]—The largest and most enthusiastic mass meeting ever held in Spalding county met at the courthouse today to select delegates to congressional convention. The large crowd and the enthusiasm was caused by the candidacy of Judge John D. Stewart for congress. There is no man in Spalding who is so near and dear to the hearts of our people as Stewart, and our people always delight to honor him.

The meeting was called to order by the vice-chairman of the executive committee, J. O. A. Miller. Dr. N. B. Drewry was elected chairman of the meeting, and W. H. Williams and Lloyd Cleveland, secretaries.

On motion, the following committee was appointed to name delegates to the convention: Robert T. Daniel, J. O. A. Miller, T. J. Mitchell, A. J. Maddox and T. J. Brooks.

The committee retired, and after a short delay, returned and offered the following resolution:

Whereas, the democracy of Spalding county, in mass meeting assembled, in compliance with the call of the democratic executive committee of said county to select delegates to a convention to meet in Atlanta on the first Wednesday in September next, to represent the fifth congressional district in the next congress of the United states; and

Whereas, Our esteemed fellow-citizen, Judge John D. Stewart, is a candidate for said nomination; recognizing his ability as a judicial officer, his experience as a legislator, and his high moral character, we deem him eminently fitted to fill the position to which he aspires.

Be it resolved, That the delegates chosen by this meeting be instructed to cast the vote of Spalding county for the Hon. John D. Stewart, and to use all honorable means to secure his nomination.

The resolution was unanimously and enthusiastically adopted. The following delegates were then proposed and elected to said convention:

John I. Hall, N. B. Drewery, E. W. Beck, H. E. Williamson, L. Cleveland, W. B. Griffin, F. D. Dismuke, J. H. Mitchell, M. Patrick, W. W. Grubbs.

The following resolution was then passed:

Whereas, In 1882, when according to the rotation rule, Fayette was entitled to name the senator, the citizens of said county with rare magnanimity selected a citizen of Spalding, with the understanding that their selection of a Spalding man was not to interfere with the rotation rule; and whereas the senatorial convention also declared by resolution that the selection of a Spalding man should not interfere with the rotation rule; and whereas the true spirit and intention of said action was to commence at Spalding as a basis, of a new court, then to Butts and then to Fayette.

Therefore, the citizens of Spalding do resolve that we recognize and declare that the citizens of Fayette are entitled to designate the person who shall be nominated to represent the 26th senatorial district for the ensuing session 1886 and 1887, and that Spalding will be entitled to name the next candidate.

The unanimity of the action of the meeting upon all questions was noticable, and does much credit to our people.

POLITICS IN THOMAS.

The Campaign in the Second Congressional District.

THOMASVILLE, Ga., July 17.—[Special.]—Since the gubernatorial contest is settled, considerable interest is centered in the congressional and legislative races. Four candidates are asking to be nominated from the second district by the congressional convention. Hon. R. G. Mitchell, of Thomasville, is the choice of this county, and will go into the convention with a good following and bright chances. Hon. H. G. Turner, of Quitman, the present representative, has already received the vote of several counties in the district, and will be a very strong candidate. Jim Guerry, of Cuthbert, and "Sug" Jones, of Albany, will each have a respectable following. Turner, Mitchell and Guerry are strong candidates and the race will be exciting. Mr. Turner at present is in the lead. For the legislature there are also four candidates in the field. S. G. McLendon, the present representative, who is offering for re-election, is able and popular, and his chances are good. P. J. Franklin, is a young lawyer of decided ability and great popularity. The present outlook is that he will lead the ticket. Messrs. Way and Bullock live in the country, and will both have a good following. The primary to make the nomination is not to be held till fifteenth September, and as it is probable that several more may enter the race before that time it is impossible at present to predict with any degree of accuracy who our next representatives will be.

THE BARTOW DEMOCRACY.

The Democratic Executive Committee Indorses the Gordon Delegates.

CARTERSVILLE, Ga., July 17.—[Special.]—The democratic executive committee of Bartow county, chosen by the mass meeting of democrats who favored a restriction of the vote in the gubernatorial mass meeting, to those only who pledged their support to the democratic nominees, met here today at one o'clock. R. H. Jones was chosen chairman, and E. B. Earle secretary. After passing the following resolutions the committee adjourned sine die:

Whereas, a mass meeting of the democratic party of Bartow county assembled in Cartersville on the 7th inst, and resolutions were offered in that meeting which contemplated a ballot for governor and member of congress, and provided that no one should vote in said meeting except democrats who would support the nominees of the party; and

Whereas, These resolutions were voted down and a substitute adopted which in substance reserved to each voter at the election to determine for himself the propriety of the nomination for governor and member of congress; and

Whereas, Almost, if not fully half, of those present, deeming the substitute adopted subversive of all party organization and authority, and believing that party success depends upon thorough organization and acquiescence in the will of the majority, and a faithful support of the nominees of the party, withdrew from that meeting and organized a separate meeting, with Colonel R. H. Jones as chairman, and adopted unanimously the resolutions voted down, and pledged their support to the nominees of the party without reserve, and elected delegates to the conventions of the party and also elected this executive committee.

Be it therefore resolved, first, That this committee has no authority to either abandon or compromise the position assumed by the mass meeting which elected it.

Second, That while we adhere to the foregoing resolution we recognize the authority of the democratic convention, to assemble in Atlanta on the 28th instant, to determine all questions of party usage and principles, and we earnestly invoke its decision on the question raised by said resolutions and substitute in the mass-meeting, and we will abide its action.

Third, That in the opinion of this committee the delegates instructed to vote for General John B. Gordon and pledged to support the nominees of the democratic party, alone represent the democratic party of Bartow county, and that it is their duty to attend the state democratic convention and submit to that convention their claim to a seat therein, and if their claim is allowed, this committee will exercise authority and proceed to discharge the duties of an executive committee of the democratic party of Bartow county.

He Predicted Aright.

BEUNA VISTA, Ga., July 11, 1886.—Editors Constitution: The election of delegates to the gubernatorial convention to be held in Atlanta, July 28th, was held here yesterday. The good old democrats of Marion county gave General Gordon two hundred and eighty-five (285) votes, and Bacon received ninety-seven (97) including six (6 negro votes. I ask in all candor, whose prophec is true, the editor of the Patriot or that of they school boy? The Bacon men, with great reluctance, yielded the destiny of their fallen favorite to the strong and powerful arms of their antagonists ere 12 o'clock had rolled around. So you see my declaration that the county would go two to one in favor of General Gordon holds true, while his, in humble obedience, falls prostrate to the ground. The patriotism, the heroism, and the statesmanship of General John B. Gordon, the people of Marion county cannot and will never forget.

Don't Want the Paper.

CENTER, Ala., July 15.—The Rome Courier, under the admirable management of Colonel M. Dwinell, had worked up a good subscription list in Cherokee county, in this state, and the subscribers are leaving the paper daily, disgusted with the present management. The editor wrote an eight-page letter to Mr. Joseph Kellett, one of the subscribers at Center, Ala., who had ordered his paper stopped. Kellett says he has paid for the paper until the first of January and has ordered it stopped, and it shall be if he has to appeal to the court for an injunction. Kellett is an old confederate, and says he does not want to read a paper edited by a cock-eyed coward who laid in a bomb proof during the war, and who abuses and slanders better men than he can associate with, when he is far enough out of the way to keep them from hitting him with a switch.

Colonel Reuben Arnold and others will talk at the workingman's Mynatt rally Monday night at the courthouse.

MORE THAN TWO-THIRDS

GENERAL GORDON PASSES THE TWO-THIRD LINE.

He Carries Five Counties Yesterday Which Puts His Vote 236—Bacon Still Holds His 78—Returns From the Counties Acting Yesterday—General Political News.

General Gordon carried every county which acted yesterday, increasing his vote of 226 by ten votes, as follows: Morgan 2, Butts 2, Cherkee 2, Rockdale 2, Talbot 2.

This gives him a clear two-thirds vote of the convention with only nine counties to hear from, as follows: Walker 2, Banks 2, Milton 2, Wilkes 4, Crawford 2, Upson 2, Irwin 2, Berrien 2, Campbell 2—a total of twenty votes yet to her from. Of these it is reasonable to predict that Gordon will carry eight of the nine, which will make his total vote 254, or very near three-fourths of the entire vote of the convention. With the votes of Burke and Bartow counties, and probably Chatham, he will certainly poll a three-fourths vote of the convention. Burke's six votes are for Hon. J. J. Jones, but a majority of them are known to favor Gordon next, and under the circumstances will probably vote for him on the first ballot. Bartow's four votes are contested, with every probability in favor of the seating of the Gordon delegates. Chatham's six votes are uninstructed, and there is not the slightest reason to suppose that they will vote otherwise than for General Gordon on the first ballot.

These sixteen unsettled votes, with the twenty to hear from, the seventy-eight already recorded for Bacon, and the 236 already pronounced and instructed for Gordon, makes the 350 votes of the convention, which will meet in Atlanta on Wednesday, the 28th of July, and choose the next governor of Georgia.

And John B. Gordon is his name.

YESTERDAY'S COUNTIES.

Four More Counties Join the March to the Mansion.

CANTON, Ga., July 17.—[Special.]—There was but little interest manifested in the primary election appointed to be held in this county today, for governor and congressman. Only three districts have been heard from and they stand 5 to 1 for Gordon. Several districts did not vote at all. Enough has been learned, however, to know that Gordon and Candler have received an overwhelming majority of the votes of Cherokee. The executive committee of the county will meet at Canton next Monday to consolidate the returns and elect delegates accordingly.

ROCKDALE ROLLS IN.

CONYERS, Ga., July 17.—[Special.]—Rockdale's two votes can be added to the Gordon column. The result of the primary in this district today was Gordon 222, Bacon 64; in Honey Creek Gordon 36, Bacon 4. None of the other precincts have been heared from, but they will increase Gordon's majority. The delegates were instructed to vote for Lester for attorney general. The election passed off very quietly.

MORGAN IN LINE.

MADISON, Ga., July 17.—[Special.]—General Gordon carried Morgan county today by over one hundred majority. The delegates are W. R. Mustin and R. H. Harris.

TALBOT IS LIKEWISE,

TALBOTTON, Ga., July 17.—[Special.]—Gordon carries Talbot by about two hundred majority. Hon. T. W. Grimes gets almost the solid vote of the county for congress, J. F. Smith beats T. J. Davis for the legislature. T. W. Robins was named for senator of the twenty-fifth district.

BUTTS ALONG, TOO.

JACKSON, Ga., July 17.—[Special.]—Butts county can be put among all the other counties which have instructed for Gordon. His majority in this county is overwhelming—over five to one. This, too, was considered one of Bacon's certain counties, until a short while ago, when the tide turned.

STILL THEY SELL IT.

The Kimball Withdraws the Application for Injunction.

The Kimball house continues to sell liquor, wine and beer by the quart.

How long this will be done cannot be told.

Yesterday was the day for hearing the application for injunction against the city, but when the case was called Mr. Hoke Smith arose and said:

"Mr. Mabra began business at the Kimball house with the opinion of the city officers that he had the right to allow liquors sold and drank on the premises. At the time the bill was filled liquors were drank so near to the premises occupied by Mr. Mabra that perhaps he would possibly be held to have allowed the use of the liquors on the premises which he controlled, believing that the law allowed it. Since last Saturday, under the advice of his counsel, Mr. Mabra has refused to allow drinking either in his store or near his store. He has yielded to the wishes of many citizens and has endeavored to place his business upon a line which cannot be questioned. He intends to conduct his business, if unmolested, until October ninth, and to finally give it up, as his license will then expire. As his business is now strictly within the law, he hopes no further effort will be made by the city officers to break it up. He hopes that the aid of a restraining order is no longer necessary, and we therefore dismiss the bill set for hearing this morning."

Mr. Smith took the crowd by surprise. This line of action was altogether unlooked for, and when Judge Clark said the matter was at an end and the injunction dismissed, the people looked at each other in astonishment, and asked what's the matter?

A few days ago the Kimball house declined to allow beer, wine or whisky being drank in the rooms, and when any one bought they were forced to hunt some other place to drink. The proprietors refused positively to allow drinking in any part of the building. This cut off their trade considerably and the crowd of beer-drinkers flocked to the Big Bonanza, where it was sold by the quart and glasses furnished free to drink it.

Mayor Hillyer was asked if the city would take any further steps toward closing the Kimball house quart barroom, and he replied that he could not tell, as the matter had not been considered. He hoped, however, that matters could be amicably adjusted, and said he anticipated no further trouble. The only question now is as to the right of Mr. Mabra to sell under his license at the Kimball house.

The lawyers for the Kimball house saloon proprietors contend that there is not now,

IF THERE HAS EVER BEEN, any violation of the law, that Mr. Mabra had a right to have his license transferred to the Kimball house, and that neither the city or county has the right to stop him from selling until his license expires.

The proprietors of the Kimball house had little to say about the matter, except that there should be no violation of the prohibition laws.

The dismissing of the application for injunction was the general topic of conversation yesterday, and many ideas were advanced as to why it was done.

The proprietors of the Big Bonaaza do not like the turn matters took. They say it was against them, and that they have been left in the cool. Mr. Bronk's license expires Wednesday, and after his application for an injunction was denied he could not get his license transferred back to his old stand on Ira street, thus losing several days' trade.

Said Mr. McMahon: "We are not losing anything save our salaries. Mr. Hollis and myself were working for Mr. Bronck. We did not buy his license and were not his partners. He paid us rent and salaries. When we were ordered to close up we did so, and when Judge Clark decided against us we shut our doors. We had no desire to break the law, and don't think we did so."

THE ATLANTA ARTILLERY.

Preparations Begun for the Organization of the New Corps.

The Atlanta artillery will probably be organized within the next ten days. Enrolment lists were sent out last week by Colonel A. F. Jones, the originator of the enterprise, and quite a number of names were secured.

Colonel Jones said yesterday that as soon as fifty names had been enrolled, a meeting would be called and an application would be made to the governor to order an election of officers.

"It is proposed," Colonel Jones continued, "to make the Atlanta artillery in all respects the equal of the Chatham artillery. Some of the best of the older citizens have agreed to become members, and I have no doubt but that many of the best young men in Atlanta will also do so. The expense of membership will not be great. A plan has been devised by which the corps may be uniformed cheaply. The chief expense will be for a hall for meetings and a place to store the guns."

"You think there is no doubt about the organization of the corps?"

"Not the slightest. Atlanta will easily support such an organization. The infantry and cavalry branches of the volunteer troops are represented in Atlanta, and so should be the artillery branch. It will not do for the capital city of the state to be without an artillery corps."

It is hoped that those who are interested in the organization of the corps will at once confer with Colonel Jones. The governor is ready to equip the new command with a battery of guns as soon as a requisition is made for them. Colonel Jones may be found in the office of the secretary of state, at the capitol.

The Artesian Well.

At five minutes past five o'clock yesterday afternoon Mayor Hillyer started the engine at the artesian well. The water started at the first stroke of the engine. The stop cocks were opened and the water began flowing up the main.

The water commissioners and a part of the city council were present, and expressed themselves as satisfied. When the engine closed down at eight o'clock the mains were full. The water will be allowed to remain in the pipes today in order to clean them out. It will be five or six days before the water is entirely out of the pipes. Tomorrow the engine will begin work, and the hydrants will be fixed so that the people may begin the use of pure artesian water.

MORELAND PARK.

PROFESSOR NEEL'S MILITARY ACADEMY THERE.

A Fairy Land to be Used for School Purposes—New and Handsome Building—Advantages Offered—Fine Corps of Teachers—When the Term Begins, Etc.

Edgewood is one of the most delightful suburbs of Atlanta, and Moreland park is the most delightful spot in Edgewood.

Major A. F. Moreland, from whom the park derives its name, bought the property a number of years ago, and at once began to improve it. He inclosed it with a handsome fence, laid out many beautiful walks and drives, constructed a lake, erected a ten-pin alley, bath houses, and other accessories necessary to make a summer resort charming, and then built two large dwellings, one of three stories and the other four. He also erected a commodious office and a spacious dining-hall. Besides these, the park contains all necessary outhouses, including barns and stables. The water is as pure as any in north Georgia, and is forced into the several buildings by means of a powerful pump. Three fine springs, one of them furnishing mineral water, adds to the water supply and makes it inexhaustible.

FAIRY LAND ITSELF

is not more beautiful than Moreland park. Its twenty-seven acres, shaded with magnificent trees and carpeted with nature's green velvet, are the home of health and long life.

It has often been remarked that Moreland park was designed by nature for the site of a large school. Professor C. M. Neel, the distinguished principal of the Kirkwood academy, impressed with its superior advantages for such a purpose, has purchased a large part of the park, and is now making preparations to establish there a school to be known as Moreland Park Military academy. He is erecting a large and handsome brick building for the use of the school, capable of accommodating 150 students. It will contain all necessary recitation rooms. In the second story will be a hall large enough to seat 500 persons. In the same story will be music rooms and the gun room. The building will be two and a half stories high, its architecture to be the latest and most approved style.

ITS FACILITIES FOR SCHOOL PURPOSES

will be unexcelled by those of any similar institution in the south. Special attention will be paid to the comfort and health of the students. The double floors will be lined with felt, so as to prevent that fruitful source of sickness, cold feet. The windows will be provided with lights selected under the direction of Dr. A. W. Calhoun, the famous occulist. The furniture will be the very best that can be purchased. In a word, Professor Neel will seek to make the building a model for its purposes.

For the boarding department, a large and well arranged four story building will be used. It contains seventeen rooms, each large and well ventilated. This is one of the buildings erected by Major Moreland, and it is provided with all the modern conveniences.

Students who attend the Moreland Park Military academy will be fortunate indeed. They will be allowed the free use of the twenty-seven acres of the beautiful park, and will have besides a spacious drill and ball ground. They will drink the pure water of a bold spring, they will they will study and recite in a perfectly appointed building, and they will have the instruction of the best teachers the country affords.

The accessibility of Moreland park is almost as good as that of Atlanta itself. Edgewood is only two miles from the center of the city by rail, and Moreland park is only about two hundred and fifty yards from the Edgewood station. All passenger trains on the Georgia railroad stop at the station. Besides, it will, probably, not be long before Edgewood and Atlanta are connected by an electric street railroad.

As to the instruction and discipline Moreland Park military academy will afford its students, none that are better can be found in the south. Professor Neel is well-known as a most successful teacher. He has been the principal of the Kirkwood academy for an uninterrupted period of fifteen years. Among those whom he has educated are the children of General John B. Gordon, Senator A. H. Colquitt, Judge John L. Hopkins, and others of like high position. He has had under his care students from Georgia, South Carolina, Florida, Alabama, Tennessee, Mississippi, Louisiana and Texas.

DURING EVERY TERM

he has refused to receive students, because his facilities required him to limit his number. In many places of business trusts his students are illustrating his successful methods of training. The school at Moreland park will be under strict military discipline. Military discipline does not carry with it unnecessary harshness. It teaches the student habits of order, neatness, and obedience—causing him, in fact, to govern himself. A graduate of the West Point military academy has been employed to be superintendent. A graduate of Cornell university will be in charge of the scientific department. Professor M. J. Goldsmith, of Atlanta, will be at the head of the commercial department, and will give daily lessons. Professor Aifred Barili, one of the most successful teachers of music in the country, will have charge of the music department. Over the department for girls an accomplished lady teacher will preside. Nothing is hazarded when it is declared that the corps of teachers selected by Professor Neel is fully equal in all respects to that of the best school in the country.

Professor Neel's handsome building will be completed by the first of September. The school will open for the fall term on the 13th of September.

FUN FOR EVERYBODY.

The Library Excursion to Tallulah Falls, Saturday, 24th Inst.

Professor Leon has been busily engaged during the past week in preparing for the hazardous feat he is to perform next Saturday at the falls. He has shipped the main rope, 2,350 feet long, and guy ropes to the extent of 25,000 feet. The latter will be attached as stays from the foot of the chasm. Some idea of the extent of the preparation necessary may be obtained by remembering that the rope used will be more than five miles long. The greatest feat ever accomplished before in this direction was the passage across Niagara. Blondin was the first who ever walked over Niagara, and Professor Leon has made the same trip. But the Tallulah exploit will be so magnificent an achievement that the Niagara exploit will be as tame in comparison as Niagara itself is when compared with Georgia's great natural phenomenon.

When Blondin walked across Niagara the world stood astounded. But the center of Blondin's rope swayed only 190 feet above the chasm, while Leon will hang by his toes from a rope suspended 1,200 feet over Tallulah crags. It was but 800 feet from shore to shore that Blondin traversed. Leon will run across a chasm 2,000 feet in width and then walk backward to the center where he will perform many perilous and skillful feats. Among others, he will attach a rope to his foot, 200 feet in length, and swing at that distance from the main line, like a pendelum, in midair. At the conclusion, he will twist a rope around his right leg and shoot down 1,200 feet to the bottom like a shot, checking his descent when near the bottom and turning a clear somersault, fall loose to the bottom.

Tallulah itself is sufficient attraction to insure a large crowd, but with Leon in addition it is safe to say this will be the biggest success as an excursion ever made in Georgia. Large crowds will come from the different lines of road leading to Atlanta. By payment of fifty cents additional the tickets will be good for three days. The regular round trip fare to go and return will be $1.50. Let all friends of the library turn out.

BONE BROUGHT IN.

A Supposed Counterfeiter From Woodville.

Yesterday at one o'clock Deputy Marshal Murphy arrived in the city with J. C. Bone, who is charged with passing counterfeit money.

It will be remembered that warrants were issued both for J. H. Bowles and J. C. Bone. the former was brought to Atlanta Friday, and placed under a bond of $500 to await trial on the 28th. The officers failed to arrest Bone, and Deputy Marshal Murphy remained over determined to catch him if possible. Friday he went to Woodville and Bone gave himself up, stating that he was ready to come to Atlanta, but that he was entirely innocent of the charges brought against him.

Mr. J. C. Davison, of the firm of Davison Bros., Woodville, learned through Deputy Marshal Murphy, of the of the family of Bone, and in a very short time that gentleman succeeded in raising a large quantity of provision which was sent to Bone's home. Dr. Durham tendered his services as physician, and went out with the provision.

Mrs. Bone and her five children are all sick and have been for several weeks. Bone himself has been confined to his bed and was hardly able to travel.

Mr. Davison came to Atlanta with the officer and Bone, and last night he said to a CONSTITUTION man:

The men, Bowles and Bone, charged with the crime of counterfeiting, are not citizens of Woodville, but live five or six miles out and in the country. The whole county is not now, nor has it been flooded with spurious coin. Not exceeding five dollars has ever been exhibited in this place. No counterfeit money was passed on Deputy Marshal Fite, in our village. A few pieces were given him as an official of the government, for the purpose of showing him that such coins had in this section, and if possible to aid him in catching up with the guilty. The idea of a wholesale general circulation of this spurious coin in our village is untrue. Our people are too wide awake and well up with the times, and the requirements of divine and civil law to countinance or aid in any such unlawful circulation of spurious coin, but to the contrary, use our best efforts that justice do appertain, and holding even our purse as trash. As to the innocence or guilt of the men accused I cannot say. Some of our best people are decidedly of the opinion that it's a great big tempest in a little tea pot."

"Do you know Bowles?"

"Yes; he is what you might call a good, well-to do citizen. Bone has nothing. His family

ARE ALMOST DESTITUTE,

as officer Murphy can tell you."

"You know Charlie Mitchell?"

"Yes."

"And Clem Moore?"

"Yes."

"Well, Moore says Mitchell told him that Bone made the moulds for making counterfeit money out of raw hide."

"I don't know anything about that. There has been all kinds of rumors about it."

Grand Lodge of Good Templars.

The nineteenth annual session of the grand lodge of the Independent Order of Good Templars of Georgia will convene in the city of Columbus on Tuesday morning next. A large delegation will be in attendance. The people of Columbus are making extensive arrangements for the entertainment of delegates. Great interest is felt among temperance leaders as to what action this body will take in reference to political action. Heretofore the Good Templars have taken no part in party politics, and those who seem to know the inner working of the order declare the same conservative course in the future as in the past. But will accept no compromise with the liquor traffic in any way. Quite a large delegation from this city will attend this session of the grand lodge.

The Cotton States Life Insurance Company.

To Policy-Holders of Said Company:

Our attention has been called to a paper addressed to the stockholders of said company by Colonel Wm. B. Johnston, its president. It is without date, but was published in the Macon Telegraph of July 15th. By this paper Colonel Johnston informs the stock holders, and, by its publication, the public, that the company was chartered in 1869; that it practically suspended business in 1877 by dismissing its agents, because it was then ascertained that its business was unprofitable; that a deficiency in the treasurer's cash of over $60,000 was discovered in 1885; that the company then attempted to sell its business, but failed to find a purchaser; and that it then determined to "purchase" its liabilities; that it was proceeding "comfortably," purchasing policies, until the 30th of last June, when it was met by a lion in its path, a bill filed by "Harrison & Peeples and J. H. Lumpkin, attorneys at law, of Atlanta, for Harrison, Girardy & Winn, policy-holders;" and that, under this bill, the company had been enjoined from purchasing its liabilities. He then appeals to the stockholders for their co-operation to "crush out this attempt to wreck the company and rob us of our rights."

In reply to this charge of a purpose to wreck and rob, we submit for your consideration the following facts, substantially alleged in the bill filed by us in behalf of our clients and other policy-holders who may become parties thereto. The history of this company, the peculiar character of its policies, its singular methods of business, and its forfeiture of the right to transact any business of insurance, show that its effort to purchase its liabilities is in pursuance of a scheme to wind up and wreck the company, to "crush out" the policy-holders and to divide the assets of the company among those who control its affairs. The "disgrace" of a failure was not to be incurred. Such disgrace was to be avoided by depreciating the value of its policies until they could be bought at a nominal price, leaving a large amount of assets to be divided among the few who had conceived and successfully executed the scheme. Such was the scheme deemed by those in control of the affairs of the company as worthy of approval, but who would consider a failure of the company as disgraceful to the state of Georgia, the city of Macon and to the company.

The bill alleges, among other things, that the company has failed, since 1884, to file the reports required by law, and that, by that failure, it forfeited, by express provision of law, all right to carry on any business of insurance; that eo instanti, when said forfeiture occurred, the assets of said company became trust funds for the benefit of policy holders, and that there was no legally authorized trustee of said funds; and prayed for the appointment of a receiver to take charge of the same and make distribution thereof to those entitled thereto.

It will be seen, therefore, that the object of the bill was not to wreck the company—that has been already accomplished by those controlling its affairs; but its object, and its sole object, was to protect the rights of policy holders and creditors. It was filed for all policy holders who might come in and join with those who had begun the litigation, as well as to guard the rights of those who might have claims against the company and who should come in and be made parties.

The president of the company says that this bill was filed by the undersigned, and omits to state the fact, well known to him at the time, that Messrs. Lyon & Gresham of Macon, lawyers of distinction and enviable reputation, are with us in the case.

Communications addressed to Messrs. Lyon & Gresham, at Macon, or to the undersigned, at Atlanta, by all who desire to join with us in the litigation and assert their rights as against the present management of the company, shall have prompt attention.

WHITE SULPHUR SPRINGS.

A Graphic Description of the Old Dominion's Famous Summer Resort.

Your correspondent counts himself happy, after a sultry journey through the cotton states, to reach this delightful resort in the beautiful heart of the old dominion, where each morning we are greeted by the arrival of THE CONSTITUTION which is a welcome visitor here. Coming, as we do from the lugubrious lowlands of the great Mississippi valley, we find much here in geological contrast to arrest and possess the traveler, where nature with lavish munificence has contributed a prestige of wealth in soil, climate and mineral resources almost beyond computation. Vast beds of ore and minerals are yet being developed, and no county in the state has been so generously supplied with mineral water as this, with springs adapted to almost every variety of human disease. The salubrity of the climate, the elevation and freedom from malarial influences, its invigorating atmosphere, its pure sparkling waters, all combine to render the Montgomery White Sulphur the most attractive spot in the mountains of Virginia. This place, with a capacity for 800 guests has been newly equipped and fournished by its owners with all modern improvements, with a view to the personal comfort of its guests, and to render available its valuable mineral waters. The grounds here are beautiful and extensive, embracing a vast lawn as lovely as an English park, sweetly o'erspread with a velvet mantle of deep summer green, and adorned with fountains, shrubbery and shade trees of noble forest oaks and luxuriant silver maples, each of which has a symmetry and beauty as distinct in its individuality as the "fair women and brave men" who dream or flirt away the happy hours beneath their leafy canopies.

Here fat herds lounge and graze in the meadow amid lovely scenes of pastoral beauty, converting their owners' grass into money and never asking for a settlement.

The mere mention of the name of Montgomery White kindles a volume of hallowed associations with its thousands of patrons, and revives with a subtle inspiration, memories of happy hours that cling like the haunting tones of some late melody.

In the near distance looms the celebrated "Lovers' Leap," a favorite retreat for those who love to commune with nature "far from the mad'd'ing crowd," in the deep shades of the mountain, where plumed birds of southern skies lend their songs of joy and exultation to rambling lovers; and among these nature's songsters we find the oriole and famous woodthrush whose notes of rare sweetness and melody distinguish this bird as the "prima donna" of the American forest. The invalid here quaffs vigor from the sparkling fountain, and imbibes inspiration from the wild mountain scenery, and breathes a pure mountain air that makes his blood tingle with delight and gives to his cheek the bloom of youth and freshness. Here we sit and watch the filmy clouds hanging over the valley, beautifully alternating with light and shade, and touching like a silver veil the dim, blue crest of the distant mountain.

The glory of the poetic sunsets here has become historic and the spectator from these celestial battlements gazes with mute rapture upon the western horizon radiant with the gorgeous tints of a glorious occident. Here amid romantic ravines of dreamy woodland are the haunts of the pheasant and wild turkey, and the speckled trout sports in the limpid waters of the winding Roanoke that skirts the rugged base of the mountain. Here forest, vale and stream are blended in a picture too lovely to paint, and the presence of lovely woman brightens each scene with beauty's smiles and graces. Amid these raptuous surroundings a lesson is written upon the heart and sense, awakening new thoughts of the grandeur of creation, and leaving ineflable impressions of the mighty power and goodness of God in thus touching with a kiss this favored spot of nature, where all around is loveliness, glory and peace. Within a few hundred yards is a beautiful cemetery, where quietly rests the heroic dust of the "boys in gray" who were buried in this county, and each year these sacred mounds are bestrewn with flowers by the fair hands of Montgomery's noble daughters who have erected to their memory a handsome monument of granite. Nestled in the bosom of these beautiful blue mountains is a model type of the old Virginia homestead, the home of that distinguished Virginian, the late William Ballard Preston, an honored member of General Taylor's cabinet. Now the famous Salt Pond mountain (4,600 feet above the level of the sea) meets the eye, whose Alpine peaks skyward climb in rare and unique combinations, and presenting a panorama of surpassing beauty and grandeur.

The Montgomery White has for years been the central point for all that is elegant of southern society which, cohesive and congenial, meets here on common ground. The isolation of the cottage system here is a pleasing feature of the place to those desiring that quiet retreat and individuality that is realized here in a homelike degree, resembling in architecture, in finished surroundings and interior comforts and elegancies, the patterns we find along the famous beaches of the Atlantic coast. Here one is not bound by those restricting conventionalities that prevail at Saratoga and Newport, but turns from busy cares to the quiet themes of peace, and enjoys that freedom of action and of dress and restful recreation, from which he merges into the cheerful realms of health. An attractive feature to those who "trip the light fantastic" are the unique dimensions of the ball room and parlors with their various artistic adornments. The interior department, with handsome marble furniture of the best quality, is presided over by a lady of culture and refinement, whose whole time is given to the supervision of this province." We had the pleasure of spending a day in your beautiful city en route for this place, and it was difficult to realize the marvelous development and progress incident to the many busy factories and industrial institutions that are springing up in Atlanta. Her splendid public buildings, modern residences and handsome new hotels proclaimed that Atlanta is keeping steady step with the progressive spirit of the times, and attaining that grand destiny among the commercial centres of the country guaranteed by her many natural advantages. Indeed it is very gratifying to note the rapid advancement the south is making in practical ideas, and unless the north begins to play trumps, her neighbor will take the tricks. At Atlanta we made connection with the Georgia line of that great system known as the East Tennessee, Virginia and Georgia railroad, and the beautiful scenery that greeted our eye along this attractive route challenges a peer in all the land, and no one can pass over this highway of luxury and speedy travel without being impressed with its natural surroundings of beauty, its personal comfort and the excellent organization and discipline of the line.

Each train adds new arrivals to the pleasant company here, and a brilliant season is assured.

GUEST.

An Important Work.

EDITORS CONSTITUTION: Some months since when we first thought of establishing a free library at the Marietta-street mission, for the benefit of the working people of that part of the city, I spoke to several friends with regard to the propriety of such a step, and every one pronounced it a good move and promised to aid us. A number of them voluntarily promised donations of books, etc. The object of this notice is to inform these, as well any others who may be "like minded," that the room is ready, the shelving in place, and the people are inquiring every day, "When will the library be opened?"

Those who have promised books, and others who wish to donate books, if they will notify me by postal or otherwise at No. 26 West Alabama street, I will send for them; or if they prefer they can send them to the above address. I have every reason to believe that this new feature in our work, together with the bath rooms which have been fitted up, will result in much good. Bath tickets are furnished the working people at five cents each, and quite a number have already applied for tickets. The library and baths will be in charge of one of our mission young men and will be kept in nice order.

Any one who desires to do good in this direction now have the opportunity of doing so by giving one or more good books, a year's subscription to some paper or magazine, a table or desk, towels, soap, combs, mirrors, etc., for the bath rooms. That portion of the city is thronged with working men, young and old, who want some suitable place to spend their evenings, and we propose to supply that want by furnishing a pleasant reading room, supplied with good books, papers, etc., where they can go in their working clothes and feel at home. With a cordial invitation to all to visit our rooms, I am most respectfully,

JOHN F. BARCLAY,
Superintendent Marietta-street Mission.

THE CONSTITUTION.

THROUGH THE CITY.

Pencil Paragraphs Caught on the Fly by the Constitution Reporters.

MONDAY NIGHT.—On account of Colonel Hammond's speech last night, the friends of Colonel Lester did not hold a meeting, but it was postponed till tomorrow night, when it will be held in the city courtroom.

A NAME OMITTED.—In the notice of the arrival of the United States troops THE CONSTITUTION omitted to say yesterday that Dr. Theodore Artand, the post surgeon, has also arrived. The doctor has many friends in Atlanta. He has been in the army twenty-six years.

WRIT OF EJECTMENT.—Yesterday a writ of ejectment was filed against the East Tennessee, Virginia and Georgia railroad company by Thos. G. Waters, who claims that the road has trespassed upon land lying near the junction of Windsor street and the public road. The damages to to land is placed at six thousand dollars.

THE CINDERELLA PARTY.—The children who rendered Cinderella so beautifully at the opera house several weeks ago have decided to reproduce the pleasing little opera on next Thursday night at DeGive's opera house. They may also appear in a matinee. The proceeds are to be donated to the hospital funds of the city.

COLONEL JOHN B. GOODWIN.—Ex-Lieutenant Governor John C. Underwood, of Kentucky, lieutenant general of the Patriarchs Militant of the Odd Fellows, has appointed John B. Goodwin, of this city, as the representative from the south on his legal corps and staff, as assistant judge advocate, with the rank of colonel.

IN A PRECARIOUS CONDITION.—Alf. Moore, one of the colored men who was hurt by the falling building Thursday afternoon, was in a very critical condition last night late. All day yesterday the darkey suffered intensely, and the physicians were with him the greater part of the time. It is now feared that he has been hurt internally.

THE GOLDEN EAGLE.—Castle No. 2, "Pride of Atlanta" Knights of Golden Eagle, the first organized in Atlanta and second in the state, will be formally instituted on Monday night next, 19th, at Loftis hall, 649½ Marietta street, by Deputy Supreme Chief S. C. Griffin, of Augusta. All desiring to become charter members are urged to be present.

THE GUN CLUB.—The Atlanta gun club was reorganized Friday, and will hold meetings twice a week. The meetings will be held in the rear of the baseball park on Mondays and Thursdays at 4 p. m. The following officers have been elected: W. A. Hemphill, president; W. L. Calhoun, vice-president; George M. Hope, secretary and treasurer.

THE DOG BITTEN CHILD.—Tennie Jackson, the small colored child, who was bitten on the right cheek by a dog on Marietta street a few afternoons ago, was some better yesterday. The fever in the child's face had abated considerably, while the swelling had gone down a great deal. The physician who is attending the child is much pleased with the changes of yesterday.

MELON FESTIVAL.—The Young People's society of the First Methodist church will give a melon festival at the residence of Mr. Wm. L. Ezzard, 66 North Forsyth street, Monday evening. A rare treat is in store for those who attend. A large melon will be voted to the most beautiful young lady present and a diminutive cantaloupe to the homeliest gentleman. Come and bring your friends.

EXCELLENT MUSIC.—Wurm's orchestra enjoys an enviable reputation in the city. They furnish fine music, and all who once hear their concerts never fail to go again. This afternoon at Ponce de Leon they give another concert. This will be by far the best they have ever given, and should be largely attended. If one wishes to have a good time and hear fine music, Ponce de Leon is the place.

THEY WANT THE BAND.—Since the United States troops have been quartered near West End a great many ladies and gentlemen have driven out to see the evening drill and to hear a military band. They have been disappointed, however, as far as the band goes, for there is no band with the two batteries. The band is yet at the barracks in Florida. The officers at the camp will probably try to have the band brought to Atlanta.

SHE IS IMPROVING.—The lady who fell through the grating in front of Ripley's crockery store on Whitehall street Thursday afternoon is improving rapidly, and was able to sit up short time yesterday, but will not be able to walk for quite awhile. The lady was Miss Almeda Williams and not Mrs. Williams as first appeared. Her knee cap was badly broken and unless the lady is extremely careful the joint will be stiff for years if not forever.

FINE MUSIC AT THE CENTRAL PRESBYTERIAN.—The celebrated Mozart quartette, composed of Messrs. Deas, Lively, Gates and Fremont, whose singing in the late concert of the musical association was so highly praised, will sing, today, morning and evening, at the Central Presbyterian church. Among other selections, they will render Rhodes' "Remember Now Thy Creator" and Kreutzer's "Sabbath Day." Doubtless a very large congregation will be present to enjoy this rare musical treat.

MRS. BAYLOR STEWART.—The accomplished principal of the Washington seminary, Mrs. Baylor Stewart, has recently received an urgent call with an offer of a large salary from a neighboring state where her enviable reputation as a teacher is well known. To the great satisfaction of her appreciative patrons in Atlanta, she has declined this offer and has determined to remain here. It is greatly to the advantage of the seminary over which she presides, and to the city of Atlanta to have permanently secured the services of a lady whose refinements place her among the foremost educators of the day.

A BROKEN LEG.—Cicero Bowles, a drayman, who has been working for the East Tennessee Railroad Transfer company, broke his left leg yesterday just below the knee. Bowles was unloading a dray in front of Chamberlin & Johnson's store, on Whitehall street, and while in the act of lifting a box off slipped and fell. The box dropped across Bowles's leg, fracturing the same just below the knee. He was carried into Dr. Alexander's office, where the fracture was reduced, after which he was placed in a hack and driven to his home, on Grant street.

SHE IS DEAD.—The many friends of Mrs. Moore, wife of Conductor Moore, of the East Tennessee road, will regret to learn of her death, which occurred at her home yesterday morning, after a long and painful illness. Conductor Moore was absent from the city on the road when his wife died, but returned yesterday at noon. When Conductor Moore took his train out day before yesterday his wife was so much better that her friends felt certain of her recovery, but during the night she suddenly became worse. Her remains left for Nashville last night. Mrs. Moore was a native of Nashville, but had been living in Atlanta a few months.

ADJUDGED INSANE.—Yesterday Mason Jenkins, an old negro woman, was before Ordinary Calhoun on a writ of lunacy. For several years past the woman has been a house servant for Mr. Corrigan, and for two years she has at times shown freaks of insanity. When one of her spells came on her she would shout and rave about a woman named Emma Hall having come between her and her husband. She frequently complained of a "misery" in her head, and her condition was so bad that she became dangerous. She was adjudged insane, and will be sent to the asylum as soon as room can be made for her.

SHE WAS NOT KILLED.

SHREWD TRICK OF A SERVANT GIRL TO ATTEND A FUNERAL.

She Says Her Sister Was Killed by a Boy With His Little Hatchet—A Sensational Story With No Foundation Whatever Which Has Just Come to Light.

"You news-hunters don't find out everything after all," said Mr. Ed. Woods to a CONSTITUTION reporter yesterday.

"No?" remarked the reporter, with a it-was-suppressed sort of a smile.

"No, you don't," answered the gentleman, emphatically.

"Then what have we missed?"

"A number one of the worst kind. One child killed anoth—"

"Jesso."

"Well, it is jesso, and it happened Tuesday evening, and there hasn't been a word in the papers about it. It is true and I know it."

"Then let's hear it."

"I can't give you the details but I'll put you on it. A day or two ago Mrs. Wood and I were visiting a lady on Kelly street, when she told us about it. She said that a negro girl about eight years of age and a negro boy about five were playing with a tin can, when the boy struck the girl on the head with the hatchet, making a wound which caused death the next morning. The boy's parents then paid the dead child's parents to say nothing and the child was buried."

"Who told you all this?"

"Mrs. Bell, living on Kelly street, near the Fair street schoolhouse. She heard a girl who was a sister to the dead child, tell it, and I guess it is true."

Just how a child could be killed by a blow from a hatchet, and then be buried without the coroner knowing it, was a puzzling question, but the reporter decided to sift the matter, and at once sought Mrs. Bell's home. In respone to the knock, Mrs. Bell came to the door, and in reply to a question, said:

"Yes, a sister of the girl who was killed, told me, but the girl is working next door, at Mrs. Robbins's."

Mrs. Robbins was at home, and when asked about the matter, said:

"Yes; a sister of the dead girl lives with me. Her name is Dot Jones. On Tuesday evening she came in, and telling me that her sister, an eight-year-old girl, had been hit in the head by a small boy, asked me to let her go home. I did so, and the next morning she came back and said that her sister was dead. As she told me of it she was crying, and I told her to go home. She left and never came back until the next day, when she informed me that her sister had been buried."

"How did the trouble between the children occur?"

"I know nothing except what she told me. She said they were playing together. The girl had a sardine box which the boy asked for. She did not give it up quick enough to please him, and he struck her on the head with the hatchet twice."

"Where did this happen?"

"On Grant street, near the child's home, I believe."

"Is your servant here now?"

"Oh, yes, would you like to see her?"

"If you please."

Mrs. Robbins called the negro girl out. She was a small, jet black negro and came to the door grinning.

"Your name Dot?"

"Yes, sir."

"You had a sister killed the other day?"

"Yes, sir."

"Who killed her?"

"A boy—a small boy."

"Where?"

"In Jonesboro."

"Jonesboro? Why, Dot, you told me it happened on Grant street," said Mrs. Robbins, considerably surprised.

"I never. She was buried in Jonesboro," said the girl, evidently greatly embarrassed.

"Where do you live?"

"On Jones street."

"Why, Dot' you told me that you lived on Grant street," said Mrs. Robbins.

"We've done moved," answered the girl.

"Well, Dot, get your hat and come with me," remarked the reporter. "I want to take you to the station house and find out about this."

"Well, now, I'se going to tell the truth," said the girl. "I wanted to get off to go to a funeral in Jonesboro, and I was afraid Mrs. Robbins wouldn't let me off, and I told her that story. I never had any sister hurt."

"But you did, and your folks were paid money not to say anything about it," remarked the reporter.

"'Fore God, I never had a sister killed. I just told Mrs. Robbins that to get off, cause I didn't believe she'd let me go."

Mrs. Robbins was so surprised at the girl's confession that she dismissed her from service at once. The police, however, are still working on the story, which was imparted to them by the reporter.

A GOOD TIME PROMISED.

Reunion of the Forty-Second Georgia at Ponce de Leon.

The executive committee of the Forty-second Georgia regiment are requested to meet at the ordinary's office Tuesday next, July 20th, at 4 o'clock p. m., to complete the final arrangements for the reunion of their regiment and the picnic that comes off on the 22d inst., at Ponce de Leon springs. Colonel R. F. Maddox will act as marshal of the day on arriving at the springs. The executive committee are composed of the following old vets: Colonel R. F. Maddox, Colonel W. H. Hulsey, Captain W. L. Calhoun, Lieutenant B. F. Walker, Sergeant Thomas M. Armstead, Sergeant J. M. Wilson, Captain J. R. Simmons. Lieutenant H. Y. Snow, Sergeant F. T. Stier, Sergeant John D. Dameron, Lieutenant Colonel J. P. Thomas, president; Adjutant W. M. Durham, secretary.

The "picnic" will be an interesting feature in connection with the reunion, and those who would avail themselves of the opportunity of spending a pleasant day should go out early, as the regiment will not move from the courthouse until 10:30, and the cars on both lines will be crowded. It is understood that the Ninth Georgia battalion has selected their team of three expert shots, who will contest—three of the best shots in the old Forty-second Georgia. Captain A. F. Perkerson, of the Ninth Georgia, will be one of the team from his regiment, and will be on hand to manage that part of the programme. The foot race between Sergeant J. M. Wilson, our tax collector, and the gallant Sergeant Moses Martin, of company A, will come off at 1 o'clock p. m. Without one or the other backs down, the jumping match between Colonel Maddox, Captain Summers and H. Y. Snow, best two in three, at 1½ p. m. The shooting match for the barrel of cold ice lemonade at 2 o'clock. Captain T. A. Haile, company I, will come all the way from his Texas home to be with his old regiment. He was one of the officers that led in the charge made on the 28th, and the boys say was two laps ahead of any one. He is now a wealthy banker at Weimar, Texas, and all the boys will be delighted to see him. The outlook for a pleasant time for this proud old command is splendid. The counties of Fulton, DeKalb, Gwinnett, Newton, Walton and Milton furnished the companies that composed this regiment, and its a conceded fact that it made a grand reputation during the war.

Special rates are offered on the Georgia and Air-Line railroads for all members of the regiment with their families.

The regiment will assemble at the courthouse on their arrival in the city about 9 a. m., at which time Mayor Hillyer will welcome them, and the response by Captain Wm. T. Smith, of Buford, will be interesting. All should hear him who can get out. The other exercises will all come off at the springs.

NEWTON COUNTY'S SHERIFF.

The Attorney General Gives an Opinion on the Subject.

Yesterday Attorney General Anderson gave the governor an opinion regarding the controversy over the appointment of a sheriff for Newton county. It is important, as it fully covers any similar cases that may arise. It is as follows:

STATE OF GEORGIA, OFFICE OF THE ATTORNEY GENERAL, ATLANTA, July 16, 1886.—His Excellency, Henry D. McDaniel, Governor: Sir—I have duly considered the communication of the ordinary of Newton county, refered to me by you. He wishes to know whether he has authority to fill the vacancy in the office of sheriff of that county, created by the recent death of the former incumbent, or whether the board of commissioners of the county is clothed with power to do so.

Prior to the adoption of the constitution of 1868, such vacancies were filled by the justices of the inferior courts, unless an election could be ordered and held more than six months before the expiration of "the exising term," in which event it was the duty of said justices to appoint an election for that purpose and, in the interim, to appoint "some fit and proper person" to discharge the duties of the office. (See Cobb's Dig. pages 212, 213, code of 1868, Sec. 250.) The inferior court was abolished by the constitution of 1868, and it was provided, by paragraph 2, section 5, of Art. 5, of that instrument, that courts of ordinary shall have such power in relation to roads, bridges public buildings, paupers, county officers, county funds and taxes, and other matters, as shall be conferred on them by law." It was further provided by section 7, of article 11, that "the books, papers, and proceedings of the inferior court shall be transferred to and remain in the control of the ordinaries, who shall perform the duties of said courts until otherwise provided by law."

Under these provisions of the constitution of 1868, the ordinaries of the several counties exercised the powers which the law had, before that time, conferred on the justices of the inferior court, in respect to county offices and county matters, until the passage of the act of January 19th, 1872, providing for the establishment of county courts, etc.

By the 11th section of that act (see code of 1882, section 313) it is enacted, that "the county judge shall discharge all the duties formerly devolved on the justices of the inferior court as to county busines, except in those counties where, by local laws, other provision has been made on the subject."

It seems that a county court was organized, under said act, in the county of Newton in the year 1872. It was abolished by an act approved February 13th, 1877. (See acts of 1877, page 64). A board of commissioners was created for that county by an act approved February 27th, 1877, (see acts of 1877 pages 261-2). By the third section of the act creating said board, it is provided:

"That said commissioners (or a majority of them, which shall be a quorum for the transaction of business) shall have exclusive jurisdiction of all matters and things pertaining to county property, county finances and county matters and affairs of every kind, which heretofore have been, by law, within the jurisdiction of the county judge of said county."

There being no local law making "other provision" for the transaction of "county business" in Newton county, the county judge of that county was authorized by the act of 1872 to discharge all the duties pertaining to it, which had formerly devolved upon the justices of the inferior court. One of the duties pertaining to that "business" was, as has been seen, to fill vacancies in county offices when an election could not be legally appointed and held "more than six months" before the expiration of "the existing term." See in this connection 65th Ga., 427.

The vacancy in the office of sheriff of Newton county having occurred so recently that an election could not be legally appointed and held more than six months before the expiration of the term, the vacancy should be filled by an appointment made by the commissioners of that county.

Very Respectfully,
CLIFFORD ANDERSON,
Attorney General.

How to Earn a Living.

Competition and progress in the business world make it necessary for parents to carefully consider this problem. A course of business training at Goldsmith's school of business, 38½ South Broad street, has been the means of procuring for many young men profitable employment. One of the laagest grocery houses in the city employs two of its students, and the demand for competent, well trained young men and ladies is larger than the supply. This school has become popular, because of the practical nature of the course of instruction, and it is recommended by business men as the most practical in the south. Special summer classes in business writing for boys and young ladies. Night school also. Send for circular to Goldsmith & Sullivan, Principals, 38½ South Broad street.

ROWDYISM IN MACON.

THE ATTEMPT TO MOB UMPIRE BURNS YESTERDAY.

Atlanta Wins the Game in the Central City—The Crowd Chafed Over the Defeat Enter the Playgrounds With Violent Intent, But is Checked by the Police.

There were only one game in the Southern league yesterday. Atlanta defeated Macon to the tune of 4 to 1, and the Macon audience were so sore over their defeat at the hands of Atlanta that they tried to mob Umpire Burns, claiming that he gave the game to Atlanta. Mr. Burns had to be escorted to his hotel by the police to prevent violence.

We have had Umpire Burns in Atlanta, and lost when he officiated here, but we have never doubted his sincerity or honesty of purpose though some of his decisions seemed to us "away off." It is very clear that an umpire cannot please two clubs at the same time, and somebody will "kick" if their club loses.

"Cyclone" Miller, Macon's pitcher, had the manliness to say Burns umpired yesterday's game fairly, and we trust the Macon audience will not be so hasty hereafter as yesterday's was.

The Umpire in Danger.

MACON, Ga., July 17.—[Special.]—The crowd at the ball park wanted to mob Umpire Burns, this afternoon. The Atlantas won the game with ease, and Mr. Burns gave only fair and impartial decisions. But the audience was so disappointed at the defeat Macon received that it could not content itself with sneers, but after the game wanted to mob Burns.

Five policemen, and Pitcher Joe Miller, the cyclone of the Southern league, found it necessary to conduct Mr. Burns through the crowd to the hotel. Late tonight it is currently rumored that Burns quietly left the city according to advice of friends. The Macon audience can't tolerate a victory by the Atlantas. The Atlanta team has conducted itself well since reaching here. The prejudice against the champions is apparent, however, and the Brown house declined to give them accommodation. The Macon team, to a man, admit that Atlanta won today in ball playing. Miller, the Macon pitcher, says that Burns umpired squarely.

Atlanta Wins in Macon.

MACON, Ga., July 17.—[Special.]—Atlanta defeated Macon this afternoon, the score standing 4 to 1. The local's costly errors and outrageous umpiring was the cause. Conway and Mappes formed the Atlanta battery. Although Conway did not strike out a man, he pitched an effective game. Chamberlain occupied the box for Macon, Daniels catcher. His pitching was not as good as usual, and he was batted freely. The field work of Shaffer, Miller and Purcell, and a one handed pickup by Corcoran, were the features of the game. Burns was hissed throughout the game, and when the last ball was fielded the crowd made for him. In consequence, the umpire had to be escorted to the hotel by the police.

Following is the score:

Diamond Dust.

Bill Sparks, the greatest living firstbaseman, will play Tuesday. See him pick 'em up.

When the Savannah club starts on the road there will be some fun watching them play ball.

Colonel Peg Leg Williams and Smith Clayton, both phenomenal pitchers, will be there Tuesday afternoon.

Manager Goldsby certainly has a very fine team, but they have been playing in very hard luck for the past three weeks.

The Macon club is playing excellent ball at this time, and it is said that Miller is pitching swifter than he ever did in his life.

Cahill, of the St. Louis Maroons, has knocked onl, one home-run this season, while Purcell of the Atlantas has knocked seven.

The great Memphis sluggers will play in Atlanta next Thursday, and until that time there will be no game on the Atlanta grounds.

Every one will notice that the clubs in the Southern league are very evenly bunched, and the race at the close of the season will be very spirited.

Funniest game of all next Tuesday afternoon. See the newspaper boys down the passenger agents. Ladies especially invited to attend free. General admission fifteen cents.

Williams, who has recently been playing third base for the Atlantas, is growing rapidly in public favor, and is filling the position of third base in a most excellent manner.

A great game, between newspaper men and passenger agents, next Tuesday afternoon at Athletic park, benefit of the Benevolent Home. Help a noble institution and see the fun.

Manager Sneed is still suffering from an injured hand, and is unable to play; but it is thought that he will be in condition to swing the bat when his club reaches Atlanta next Thursday.

The St. Louis papers are pitching into Manager Schmeltz for the very sorry club he has gotten together this season and say that he is not putting forth proper efforts to secure a good team. Gus Schmeltz knows good players and should procure them.

The Charleston directors did a very wise thing when they dismissed Manager Cushman. He is thoroughly incompetent and understanding nothing about his business, and all the visitors to Charleston say that he had a very big case of swell-head.

A gentleman who has witnessed the playing of the National league and American association clubs, stated the other day that the Atlanta champions could not be equaled in base running except by the St. Louis Browns and the Chicagoes. The Atlantas up to the present time have stolen 246 bases, and have knocked 20 home runs.

A GREAT GAME

Between the Newspaper Men and Passenger Agents Next Saturday.

The Atlanta newspaper men and Atlanta passenger agents will play a great game of ball at Athletic park next Tuesday afternoon for the benefit of the Benevolent home. Lots of fun. Don't fail to go out. Admission 15 cents. Grand stand 10 cents. Ladies specially invited—will be admitted free. Colonel Bill Sparks, of the Boston News, will play first base. Colonel Peg Leg Williams, the only one legged pitcher on earth, and Colonel Smith Clayton, the only living pitcher having eight distinct curves, will appear. The costumes will be gaudy, and the fun will be immense. Go out sure.

Dimmock, of Carrollton, gave a spirited and enthusiastic address. A. S. Smith, of Fulton, gave a short address that closed the morning exercises. The afternoon was occupied in singing and speaking for prizes by the children. Two prizes were awarded to Miss Sally Lee Culver, of Temple Grove, for best and second best song. The prize for best speech was awarded to Miss Lula Wood, of Mount Gilead, the prize for second best speech was awarded to Marvin Culver, of Temple Grove. The first prize for best song by the school was awarded to Wesley Chappel. For second best song, the prize was awarded to Sharon. JOHN KEELY,

"The Leader of Low Prices,"

Has just shown us his last purchase in laces from the assignee of a New York bankrupted importer. They are marvellous! We are truly not experts in the lace trade, yet we can see at once that "somebody has been hurt." John Keely is ever on the alert to take advantage of such "windfalls," and his customers invariably get the benefit of them. His policy is not to hoard such things up for a future day and a big price. He prefers to have trade active, and goods pushed out at low prices, and this is the correct plan of business in these days of stringency. He is also offering rare bargains in parasols and white goods, hosiery and gloves. A visit to this store now will repay you, for he is selling extraordinary bargains just now in order to stir up the trade. He has just marked down 10,000 yards of ginghams, of his ten cent grade, to five cents a yard. Friend Keely is one who puts the knife deep into prices when he cuts them. His store is thronged daily in consequence of the low prices which he is making on all classes of goods. Read the captain's notice on our first page.

HAMMOND SPEAKS.

A LARGE AUDIENCE HEARS HIM AT THE OPERA HOUSE.

He Addresses Himself to His Opponents and Replies to Their Charges—Brief Synopsis of His Speech—It Will be Published in Full in Tomorrow's Paper.

The speech of Hon. N. J. Hammond at the opera house last night was heard by an audience of eight hundred representative citizens. They were evidently in full sympathy with the speaker, for when he made his appearance upon the stage he was greeted with enthusiastic applause, which continued several minutes. A number of prominent gentlemen had seats on the stage.

Judge J. A. Anderson introduced the speaker. He said that the gentleman he had the privilege of introducing needed no introduction to the people of Atlanta or Fulton county. He felt that it was a privilege to introduce the man he was confident would be retained in office, because he was so capable of discharging the duties of

HIS HIGH POSITION.

Following the applause which greeted this statement, Judge Anderson said that the times in some respects were out of joint. There were some who attempted to settle the question of labor versus capital by improper means. No clap-trap should be resorted to in settling such an important question. What was needed was an earnest effort to bring about a proper settlement by men whose capabilities and experience fitted them to approach the question understanding it. The educational interests of the country were also pressing themselves upon the attention of the people. In such times it was not well to take out of office a man with eight years experience in the affairs of government merely that the desire of other men to get into office might be gratified. He closed by saying: "I have the pleasure of introducing the Hon. N. J. Hammond."

The speaker was RECEIVED WITH PROLONGED APPLAUSE.

He began by speaking of the fatigue he suffered on account of his long journey from Washington. A mirth provoking anecdote quickly followed, causing a man in the audience to say: "Your fatigue has as good an effect as some men's rest." The speaker announced that he would be controlled in what he said very much by what had recently been said by his opponents. He then briefly reviewed the canvass of Judge Stewart and Colonel Mynatt, and declared that the people owed him a debt of gratitude for what they had learned of politics from his opponents' side. The canvas in opposition to him had been going on at least since the second of May. His opponents complaimed that he had not been to see the people. It was unfair to make such a complaint, because the people had sent him a thousand miles to attend to public duties. Another complaint was that the recent mass meeting to Colonel Mynatt, because the time fixed to precede the election of delegates to the nominating convention was so short. He thought it strange that Colonel Mynatt and his friends should urge such a complaint, considering that Colonel Mynatt had been at home working for himself for several months.

HAD BEEN UNFAIR

Referring to the arguments of those who had recently spoken in opposition to him, the speaker said that he would proceed to reply, taking up the charges as they occurred to him.

First, it was charged that Colonel Mynatt had called to his attention two years ago that there ought to be a law to prevent a man sent to prison by the United States court from being sent to the penitentiary at Albany, N. Y. In reply he said that only ten men from Georgia were now in prison at Auburn, and that only about three per annum were sent there. The penitentiary at Albany was selected because place for United States prisoners.

Second, it was complained that he did not vote for the labor arbitration bill. He acknowledged that he did not, and explained that the bill was worse than useless.

Third, it was complained that he, with one hundred others in the house of representatives, voted against the oleomargarine bill. He admitted the truth of the charge, and said that he voted against the bill because the laboring classes opposed it.

Fourth, it was complained that he was in 1879 the attorney of the Central railroad, while Colonel Mynatt was working for the country. He showed the falsity of the charge by proving that in 1879 he was in congress. He practically ceased to be the attorney of the Central railroad in 1874.

Fifth, it was complained that in the National bank case he had taken a fee of

THIRTY-FIVE HUNDRED DOLLARS.

This was untrue, as the records would show. He had taken only five hundred dollars.

Sixth, it was complained that he had taken large fees, when attorney general, in certain cases against state officers. This was untrue, because in one instance where he recovered $98,000 he received only one hundred dollars.

He then fully explained his action relative to the Reagan interstate commerce bill, following the explanation with a scathing review of Colonel Mynatt's connection with railroad legislation.

He referred to a letter written by Colonel Mynatt in which he asked: "What use have we for the democratic party? Why perpetuate such a useless thing?" He denied that he had agreed not to seek another term in congress, explained his failure to reply to a letter from the Atlanta chamber of commerce, and concluded by eloquently urging the necessity of keeping the south solid.

The speech was nearly two hours long. It was repeatedly interrupted by enthusiastic applause. No attempt has been made to report it in full, because a verbatim report will be printed in THE CONSTITUTION tomorrow morning.

MYNATT MASS MEETING.

The Workingmen's Meeting Last Night at 31 South Broad Street.

The Mynatt mass meeting last night at 31 S. Broad street was called to order at 8 o'clock. Mr. John T. Falvey was selected as chairman and Jerome M. McAfee as scretary.

The meeting was first addressed by Captain W. G. Newman, who was highly eulogistic of Colonel Mynatt, stating that he was the friend of the working man; that he was a man of big brain and big heart and that he would use them for the use of the working men. That it was all a mistake to say that Hammond was a great man, but he used all his power against his people. He had failed to represent them, and was only a little railroad lawyer, pettifogging in congress for the railroads he represented.

Colonel Reuben Arnold was next called on and made one of his characteristic speeches. He said now was the time for the workingmen to stand by their rights. He said he had heard of constitutional lawyers, but Mr. Hammond was an unconstitutional lawyer. That all measures introduced for the relief of our merchants and workingmen were opposed by Hammond upon the plea of unconstitutionality. He opposed the railroad commission because unconstitutional. He opposed the government's taking back from railroads the forfeited public lands because unconstitutional. He opposed the bill for arbitration of strikes because unconstitutional. He opposed the oleomargarine bill because it was unconstitutional.

He said that Hammond was the great unconstitutional lawyer, and he thought it time to send a constitutional man to represent the great people of our city and district.

Mr. John Ranschenberg, a working man, was then called on and spoke earnestly in favor of Colonel Mynatt. He said the working men had sent Colonel Hammond a petition to present to congress in their interest, and Mr. Hammond had coolly pocketed their petition, and had not presented it to congress That he thought it but fair to all classes of people in the district that we should send a man to congress who would represent fairly all classes. This speech was loudly applauded.

After appointing committees the meeting adjourned to meet Monday night next in the court house.

SPARRING FOR THE PRIMARY.

Proceedings of the Fulton County Democratic Executive Committee.

The democratic executive committee of Fulton county assembled yesterday at 12 m., at the city court room, and organized by electing Charles A. Collier chairman and Hooper Alexander secretary. In pursuance of the resolutions of the mass meeting of Monday night last the committee proceeded to name justices of the peace for the different districts of the county as managers in the primary election of next Tuesday, the 20th. It was agreed that the candidates for the congressional nomination should name one manager each for each precinct, and that when these were communicated to Mr. Collier, the chairman of the committee, he should appoint them. Should the managers named by the candidates fail to appear to hold the election, the presiding justice of the peace is empowered to call in some one else.

The justices named are as follows:

North Atlanta, S. H. Landrum.
Cook's, W. C. Horton.
Peachtree, J. F. Walker.
Buckhead, W. C. Maddox.
Oak Grove, B. F. Burdette.
Blackhall, H. L. Culberson.
Adamsville, A. A. Wilson.
Collins's, Thomas Moore.
South Bend, Adam Pool.
East Point, John Wordlaw.
Bryant's, J. J. Fain.

No justice was named for south Atlanta, it being understood that both justices were unwilling to act. Mr. Collier and Mr. Barnes were appointed to name some other gentleman in south Atlanta to take the place of the justice.

The managers were empowered to appoint clerks.

A resolution was adopted instructing the managers to make their returns to the committee at the city court room at 12 o'clock the next Wednesday, the 21st, when the returns will be consolidated by the committee and the result by them declared. The managers, whose names are published, are requested to take notice and govern themselves accordingly.

HAYWOOD SPRINGS, Wayneville, N. C., July 14, 1886.—Dear Sir: "The Haywood White Sulphur is, this year, more beautiful than ever. The grand old mountains have the same sublime majesty; the abundant rains have given to the foliage on their sides a darker green, and to the meadows at their base an indescribable charm. The babbling brooks glittering in the sunlight, sing their ceaseless hymn as they hasten away from their mountain birthplaces to their destination, thousands of miles distant from them and thousands of feet below them.

Prominent speakers at the workingmen's Mynatt rally at the courthouse Monday night at 8 o'clock. Come out.

A DISASTROUS FIRE.

A DOZEN HOUSES SUCCUMB TO THE FLAMES.

A Lamp in Loftis's Hall, Marietta Street, Explodes and the Fire Consumes a Dozen Houses—The Fire Department Almost Powerless on Account of the Scarcity of Water.

An alarm of fire was turned in last night about ten o'clock from the box corner Marietta and Simpson streets.

The first notice that many people had of it, was the rushing engine that went pell mell out Marietta street. In a few moments the whole sky in the northwest was brilliantly lighted up, and there came the general alarm calling out all the department. The Georgia Pacific depot, the Exposition hotel, mills, etc., are all out that way, and sniffing a big item in the air a CONSTITUTION reporter took up his lonely pilgrimage for the scene of action. You can always set down a fire forty times as far as it seems to be at night, and this blaze was no exception to the rule. After toiling through alleys, across lots, jumping ditches and going half a mile or so out of the way, the reporter came in sight of the flames, and a regular conflagration greeted the sight. But for the fact that it was a still night disastrous results might have come from last night's fire.

To begin with, there was not a water plug in half a mile of the burning houses, and if a stiff breeze had been blowing all that section of the city would have been at the mercy of the flames. Only a single stream could be gotten on the fire and that was through just

THREE THOUSAND FEET OF HOSE.

The firemen had all they could do to arrest the flames with their limited supply of water, and about a dozen small houses were smouldering ruins before the fire was under control.

The scene was a wierd one when the reporter arrived. Half a dozen houses in different stages of destruction, hundreds of excited people were rushing in all directions, household effects were piled about in the utmost confusions on all sides, children were crying, women were wringing their hands, and men were looking with varying emotions on the loss of the accumulations of years of labor. Here and there through all the bustle and confusion the white helments of the firemen could be seen as they rushed back and forth, dragging hose, pulling down fences, chopping through the roofs of houses, and waging hand to hand warfare with the fire fiend, which defiantly licked out its tongues of flame and took one house after another in its consuming embrace.

ORIGIN OF THE FIRE.

The fire began a little after 10 o'clock in what is known as Loftis hall, near the corner of Powder Springs road on Marietta street. The Knights of Labor were holding a meeting there and the fire is said to have been caused by the explosion of a lamp. The flames spread with wonderful rapidity, and several neighboring houses were burning brightly and the hall nearly consumed when the fire department arrived on the scene. Chief Joyner ran over a man on his way there who was standing in the middle of Marietta street, but could not stop then to inquire into his injuries. As soon as possible he organized the work of fighting the flames and began laying hose from the nearest plug. No. 3 was sent back to the engine house to be in readiness if another alarm should be sounded in another part of the city. As the reporter met the chief he said:

"Now this shows the truth of that piece in THE CONSTITUTION the other morning about the need of another engine and more men and hose. I have detailed a lot of special men here. I don't begin to have enough to handle this fire. And then you see I had to send No. 3 back to town. It would never do to have the whole department away. Suppose an alarm should be sounded for some other point while we are working here, you see No. 3 is ready to go right ahead. But sending her back curtails my force so that I haven't enough men to work here satisfactorily. We need that other engine bad. Stir 'em up about it."

SOME OF THE LOSERS AND LOSSES.

The heaviest loser perhaps in the value of his loss was Mr. J. A. Loftis, though several others lost all they had. Besides the two-story building, known as Loftis hall, on the ground floor of which was his store, Mr. Loftis's dwelling was next door, and this was in ashes almost as soon as the hall. The circumstances surrounding Mr. Loftis were of such a nature as to add to the seriousness of the blow. Yesterday Mr. Loftis buried his only daughter, a bright girl in her teens and the broken hearted father was almost crushed by the blow. Last night's calamity following fast upon his bereavement almost crazed him and many of his neighbors expressed great concern lest he should give way under the double shock. Mr. Loftis had $2,000 insurance, but this will not nearly cover his loss.

Adjoining houses were occupied as dwellings or small stores, and the losses were total in several cases, while in others many things that were saved were stolen where they were left in the street.

R. S. Thomas and Felix Vaughn had small stores, and the latter had $700 insurance.

Mrs. Wooten is a poor widow, who went into the country yesterday to visit her daughter, and is ignorant of her terrible loss last night.

Mrs. Wilson's house was burned to the ground, but most of her effects were moved out.

Bob Childers, who occupied a store across the street, moved out his goods and lost a good deal from theft.

The telegraph and telephone poles were burned in front of the buildings, and the wires are all down on the ground.

Returning from the fire, the CONSTITUTION man stopped at O'Brien's drug store, 212 Marietta, and found Mr. A. J. Anderson, the gentleman who was run over by Chief Joyner's wagon. His shoulder had been dislocated and his face pretty badly bruised up. Skilled physicians had reset the shoulder and the other injuries were attended to. Mr. Anderson said he was standing in the street a few feet from the sidewalk when the chief came dashing down the street and ran over him. He said as the engine had passed he was not expecting another fire apparatus. The wounded man is a jeweler, conducting his business at 212 Marietta street.

BET CROW.

A Dialect Story of Georgia Life.

[Written for "The Buffalo Express" by Mat Crim, Author of Stories in "The Century," etc. Copyright, 1886.]

Mr. Jesse Crow sat on the front fence with his feet comfortably resting on the lower rail, whittling a stick. Crops had been "laid by" and he felt that he could afford to sit on the fence and engage in the pleasing recreation of whittling. But it was not on this particular occasion enjoyed as heartily as usual. It seemed to be a mere mechanical occupation to aid him in solving a knotty problem. He was a small, wiry, mild-eyed man, with a deeply tanned complexion and a good-humored expression. He was a prosperous farmer and highly respected in the settlement, where he had a good reputation for fair, honest dealing and clear judgment, though often permitting his love of money to overrule the rigid laws of justice.

"Hit ain't no use in bein' hard on enny cretur," he would say mildly. "We 'uns ain't all been tried erlike, an' thar mought be extinguishin' sarcumstances ter jedge by if we 'uns could see 'em."

But this morning his brows were drawn together in a perplexed frown and he stared at the slowly sharpening splinter with abstracted eyes. The steady, even fall of hoofs upon the hard dry road roused him from his reflections, and glancing up he saw Jim Edwards, his neighbor and crony, approaching on his old gray mare. Mr. Jesse Crow hailed him with hearty delight.

"Won't you'uns light an' come in?" he asked hospitably.

"No, reckon not this mornin'. Nancy's in er pow'ful hurry for some truck, but I don't know as I min' a jinin' you'uns thar a little while."

He dismounted, threw the bridle over a low projecting limb of the great chestnut tree standing near the gate, and in a few minutes sat on the fence by the side of his friend.

"You'uns have hearn erbout Tom Fannin a taking that money from Bill Sanders, down whar they air a workin' on the new railroad?" he said, fumbling for his knife from mere force of habit, and settling himself for a little gossip.

"Yes," said Mr. Crow, seriously, "an' I don't min' sayin' that I never was more tuk down."

"Well, I thought better o' Tom than that myself, but you'uns know what the scriptures say 'bout Satan allus a havin' work fer idle hands ter do, an' its purty well known Tom Fannin's as lazy as his hide kin hold."

"Yes, that's so," asserted his companion.

Edwards stole a glance at him, shifted the tobacco around in his mouth, and then—

"How does Bet take hit?" he rather diffidently inquired.

"That's what's pesterin' me erbout the matter, Ed'ards," exclaimed Mr. Crow, dropping the last sliver from his whittling, and turning toward his companion. "Bet 'lows he didn't do hit, she knows in reason he didn't, an' ter that point she sticks."

"But, man alive, the money was found in his pocket. Hit wus this way, an' I hearn hit frum Bill hiself. Him an' Tom has been a roomin' together since Tom tuk an' start to work down thar, an' Bill one mornin' put $20 in the top er his trunk with nobody seein' hit but Tom. At dinner time hit wus gone. The men, black an' white, wus all fer havin' their pockets searched, an' when they come ter Tom's coat a hangin' on er bush thar wus the money stucked down in the little pocket. Some er the boys say he turned mighty white an' 'lowed he didn't know t'was thar, an' kept on denyin' hit, but the pint is, how did hit come thar then?"

"I've tole Bet that time an' agin', but every time she sez, 'Pap, I know he didn't take hit.'"

"How do you'uns know?" say I.

"'Cause he sez so,' as if that kin clar up the matter. Thar aint no reasonin' with wimmen folks, Ed'ards."

"That's so, Jesse. If you'uns ax em why they believe sech an' sech they'll apt ter say 'jes', 'cause,' an' that's all the sense you'uns kin git out'er 'em."

"Hit aint my fault Bet's been a keepin' comp'ny long o' Tom Fannin—hit's er puzzlin' thing ter me how she kin like him, knowin' he is sech an' sorter triflin', but Bet's got er head of her own," with a sudden touch of pride, and ... along the rail for another loose ...

"... 's er likely gal, an I do say hit ter Jesse Crow, an' I'd a been mighty ... e'd a tuk a likin' ter Pink. She ... ter work an' she aint afeard ter ... tu hit."

"Don't I know that better'n you'uns, Bet," he exclaimed bitterly. "Don't I know you'uns can't bear the sight o' me, but I'm agoin' to show yer that I ain't ungrateful fer what you'uns done fer me."

He passed his hands over his eyes. "Bet, I done somethin' for you'uns that for yer sake I'm now agoin' ter undo. Next Sunday is meetin' day at Cool Spring an' I'm agoin' ter make public acknowledgments o' my temptations, an' the doins' o' Satan in my heart. I've keered for you'uns mighty nigh to the ruination o' my hopes for a better world. But if God A'mighty kin fergive me, then you'uns kin tu, Bet. Good evenin'."

He turned to go. She sprang up scattering her quilt pieces right and left.

"Bill!" she gasped, but he strode hastily out of the room, mounted his horse, and rode away.

The last song had been sung and the congregation at Cool Spring church were about to rise to receive the benediction when Bill Sanders stood up, and clearing his throat looked around on the people. As he met the curious expectant eyes fixed upon him, he seemed to waver, to flinch from his purpose.

"Jes' speak out, Brother Sanders," said the pastor encouragingly, and the kindly voice of the old man gave him fresh strength.

"Brother'n an' sistr'n, hit becomes my duty ter tell you'ns o' the temptations I've been a fallin' under this year, an' ter ax yer forgiveness an' yer prayers. I've been a wanderin' fer from the right way. I done er turrible thing ter brother Tom Fannin, took away his good name, an' made him a byword an' en example o' evil among yer. For de sake o' one who hit ain't becomin' in me ter name here, an' who ain,t ter blame any more'n a innocent child, I 'lowed myself ter hate him, ter wanter cast disfavor 'pon him."

He paused, and a pinfall might have been heard in that church, so intensely quiet, so breathless were the excited people. He looked at Tom Fannin leaning forward eagerly on his seat, then his eyes rested for a moment on Bet Crow's drooping face, and he could almost feel the quick flutter of the pulse in her round soft throat. His eyes sank to the floor, he drew a long breath.

"Brethr'n, this is er public acknowledgement; an' the solemn, bindin' truth; I put that money in Tom Fannin's pocket with my own hands."

He said no more, but sat down and hid his face in his hands, and a stir and murmur seemed to sweep over the church like a wave. The agitation, excitement, seemed about to break dignified Christian bounds, when Mr. Jesse Crow rose and solemnly said:

"Brethr'n, we'uns have all hearn the public acknowledgements o' Brother Sanders' wrongdoin'. He has tole hit 'thout bein' axed an' o' his own free will an' inclernation. In dealin' with this errin brother we'uns mus' bear in min' thar air allus extinguishin' sarcumstances surroundin' ever' deed done by weak mortal creetur an' a confession o' guilt is er long way to'ards complete repentance."

Well, that public confession was the climax of that year of events in the Cool Spring settlement, if I except the wedding at Mr. Jesse Crow's later in the season, when house and yard overflowed with guests, and all united in giving a kindly hand and a hearty word to the bridegroom. Bill Sanders was not present. He had gone out west to seek a new home, and let us hope that he was in time as happy as Tom Fannin and his wife, once the belle of Cool Spring settlement—Bet Crow.

"HIT'L NEVER MAKE ENNY DIFFERENCE WITH ME, I DON'T CARE WHAT THEY SAY."

... make enny difference with me, I don't care what they say."

"But the whole world 'll be turnin' agin me now, Bet. I've come over to tell you'uns I won't think hard o' yer fer takin back yer promises," he said with an effort.

"Promises air promises, an' I never make 'em 'thout wantin' ter keep 'em," she said steadily.

He raised his head, he saw the tears on her face, the trembling of her lips, and starting up threw one arm around her, and pressed her head against him.

"God A'mighty bless yer, Bet, honey, for keerin' fer sech a poor creetur as I, when you'uns mought git the best. If I don't make somethin' o' myself now arter this, I'll never ax yer to keep yer word," he whispered, passionately pressing his rough cheek against her smooth warm one.

For a moment the girl did not move, then she gently removed his arm, and sitting upright began to look confusedly for her shuttle, flushing, paling, not daring to meet her lover's eyes.

"Can't nothin' be done to clear up the matter?" she said finally in a low tone.

Fannin shook his head sadly.

"Nothin'; hit wus thar, an' I haint no way a provin' I didn't put hit thar."

That was true and gossip was rife throughout the settlement, and the members of Cool Spring Church met in solemn conclaveto "deal" with the erring young man, who persisted in denying his guilt, thereby adding the sin of a lie to the sin of stealing. He lost his situation on the railroad, he lost his friends, and seemed to sink to the lowest ebb of fortune. But his trials put a new spirit into him, or else called forth a greet deal of latent strength, for he met the slights of his associates and neighbors with quiet dignity and went to work energetically and late, as though finding in constant occupation a panacea for his troubles.

"He'll soon git tired o' that, min' what I say," said one prophet, "an' go ter idlin' round agin."

But he did not, growing thin and brawn with constant toil. But the change had come too late. The charge of theft could neither be forgiven nor forgotten in that community.

Farmer Crow carefully refrained from mentioning Tom Fannin's name to his daughter since the morning he sat on the fence and talked with Mr. Jim Edwards. But his shrewd, kindly eyes observed the young man's demeanor with approval.

"He's got more grit than we'uns calkerlated on," he mused.

At last he broached the subject to Bet.

"Hit's a pity Tom Fannin sp'ilt his fortune a takin' that money; he's a doin' so mighty well now."

Bet looked reproachfully at him. "How do you'uns know he took hit, pap?"

"How do we'uns know he didn't, Bet? Honey, don't be a deceivin' yerself. I'm mighty proud you'uns have dropped his comp'ny."

"I haint dropped hit, pap. We'uns are jest a waitin."

He sighed.

"You'uns air pow'fully set in yer ways, Bet, fer er young creetur."

"Pap, I mought as well give up livin' as ter give up Tom. You'uns know how 'tis," her eyes traveling to the round, placid face of her mother sitting out in the entry knitting.

Her father's face softened.

"Well, well, honey, don't do nothin' you'uns 'll be sorry fer, that's all I ax. Waitin' is sometimes a mighty tryin' thing."

"But hit mus' be better'n not havin' anything fer wait fer," she said, solemnly.

But as time passed monotonously without bringing any vindication of her lover's name, and hope died slowly and painfully, she learned the bitterness of waiting.

* * * * * * *

It was "fodder-pulling" time, and the farmers were out from dawn until evening stripping the yellowing blades from the corn, tying it, and stacking it in the widehot fields. The new railroad skirted the western bounds of Mr. Jesse Crow's farm, and through the almost breathless stillness could be heard the ring of hammer and steel from the bridge building over Cool Spring Creek. Some of the strange workmen had a reputation for lawlessness quite shocking to the simple, peaceable country people.

It was about the middle of the afternoon, and Bet Crow was spinning listlessly, while her mother carded the rolls for her. They were not dreaming of any danger, when a man, coatless, hatless, covered with dust, and panting heavily, leaped the fence and ran across the yard. It was Bill Sanders.

"Mis' Crow, for the love of God let me hide in here," he gasped hoarsely, stumbling over the door-step, and then staggering into the room.

"Bill Sanders, what on the face o' the yeth!" cried the frightened woman, her fresh-colored face growin pale.

"They air arter me, they mean to kill me," he panted, crouching under the loom, quivering with exhaustion, wild-eyed with fear.

"Bet, Bet! what does hit mean?" exclaimed her mother appealingly.

Bet ran to the door, and shading her eyes with her hand looked out. Four or five men were running along the road toward the house, searching and cursing fiercely. She had no idea what had happened, but she knew they were workmen from the bridge, and a desperate looking gang they were to her frightened eyes. For a moment her heart quailed. They might murder her and her mother, as well as Bill Sanders. He was incapable of offering any defense just then, and pity filled her heart. Her eyes flashed, her lips were set in a determined line. They should not get him if she could help it.

"Quick, mam, blow the horn for pap," she said, then sprang up on a chair and took down her father's shot-gun from over the door, a trusty weapon he loved next to his wife and daughter.

"Don't you'uns come enny nigher till you tell what you want," she said clearly, raising the gun in her none too steady hands as they scrambled over the fence. For a moment they were nonplussed, and stared at her with a mixture of surprise and uncertainty.

"We want the man that's hid in thore," said one lowering fellow fiercely.

"What for?"

"To hang to the nearest tree."

"What's he been adoin'?"

"Killing a friend of our'n down on the railroad."

The horror of it almost took her breath, but she maintained her defensive attitude bravely.

"That's er turrible thing," she said, praying that every blast of the horn would bring her father.

"See here, young woman, you'd better get outer that and let us have him. We don't mean no harm to you, but we aint got time to argue with you."

"I'm plum sorry for you'uns, but I'm bound ter do what I kin fer the law. We'uns air peaceable folks here, an' like ter be punished cordin' ter law. If you'uns'll git the jestice o' the peace an' have Mr. Sanders tuk ter jail I ain't no objections."

Their wrath was evidently cooling somewhat, and they were forced to a reluctant admiration of her pluck.

If they had known that she was trembling like a leaf, that her arms were feeling nerveless and weak, her eyes dim! She knew that she could not hold out much longer in that threatening attitude. A moment of dead silence fell while the men consulted in whispers, and Bet could hear the deep, hurried breathing of the hidden man and the horrified moans and ejaculations of her mother with a distinctness absolutely painful to her. But help had come. Her strained eyes wandered despairingly from those dark, angry faces confronting her, and she saw her father and two or three other men coming through the lot.

Matters were at last peaceably adjusted. Mr. Crow argued so mildly and reasonably with the avenging party that they consented—the farmers bearing them company—to take their prisoner and allow the law to deal with him.

"But I'll tell you what, Sanders, you owe your life to that girl. We would a killed you sure if she hadn't a stood up in your defense like she did. We didn't want to hurt her," said one of the men grimly, and Sanders groaned heavily. He gave Bet one humbly grateful glance as they led him away.

The whole occurrence occupied but a brief space of time in the bright summer day. The dust settled softly upon the road behind the retreating footsteps of the self-appointed posse and their prisoner, and the crickets shrilling in the grass seemed the only living thing left. Bet sank down on the doorstep, and hid her face in her hands, faint and weak from the strain upon her nerves.

"Drink this, honey, hit'll do you'uns good," said her mother, holding a brimming gourd of water to her pale lips, and she drank a little and declared that she felt better.

"Do you'uns spose they'll hang him, Bet?" in a fearful whisper.

"I don't know, mam, if he's tuk human life"—she paused with a shudder.

A new sensation had been furnished the settlement, and a far greater one than the mere theft of a little money. The men met to discuss the crime, and the women spoke of it in low, awestruck tones. Then it was discovered that the man had not been killed, but badly wounded and stunned. A quieter spirit prevailed, and when it came out that the stranger had struck the first blow and that Sanders had only acted on the defensive the tide of public sympathy turned in his favor.

It does not belong to this story to go into all the details of the trial held at the September term of the county court. It is enough to say the young man was acquitted and walked out of the court-room pure, but subdued and quiet. He went direct to Farmer Crow's, and walked to the room where Bet sat with her patchwork.

THE SOCIAL WORLD.

EVENTS OF THE WEEK ON THE SOCIAL SIDE OF LIFE.

A Number of Pleasant Paragraphs About the Happenings in Society Circles—The Meetings of Clubs—Several Weddings Past and in Prospect—Notes of Various Sorts

The social circles of Atlanta have never been duller than during the past week. With the sultry summer days and such pleasant evenings as have been, there should have been lawn parties and social gatherings innumerable, but for various causes such entertainments have been exceedingly rare. The Athens commencement has claimed quite a number of society folks during the week, and many who have not already gone are making preparations to go. And then there are a larger number away from the city at the various summer resorts than have been at one time in several years.

The Capitol City club has inaugurated a series of entertainments which promises to be as interesting as any ever given in the city. On Wednesday afternoon of each week the club rooms will be thrown open to the ladies, and receptions of various kinds will be given. At each reception ladies of the families of the members will be invited to receive. The beauty, and what will prove the popularity of these entertainments, is that they will last from only about five until seven. This will allow many to attend who could not otherwise do so. The first of this series will be given next Wednesday, and will be a "five o'clock tea," and will last from five until seven. The club will spare neither pains nor expense to make these receptions pleasant to all who attend, and it is expected that the rooms will be crowded. On Wednesday week the entertainment will probably consist of a lecture on art, by some member of the club, or at any rate it will be made interesting. In a few weeks a hop from five until eight will be given, and a musical concert is also contemplated. So it can readily be seen that this summer series of entertainments will be among the most interesting ever given by the club. Members of the club wishing cards to send to their freinds for the "five o'clock tea" next Wednesday afternoon, will be supplied by calling at the club, where a list of cards sent out can also be seen.

In the commencement exercises of the convent school of Notre Dame, Bellevue, near the city of Quebec, Canada, two young ladies from Atlanta won distinguished honors. They are Miss Estorah Stephens, daughter of Colonel John Stephens, and Miss Kate Carey, daughter of Atlanta's well-known merchant, Mr. John Carey. Miss Estorah graduated with several medals for proficiency, notably in music. Miss Carey's part in all her classes was high, and brought to her tokens of merit. Colonel Stephens has two other daughters in this institution—Miss Annie and Miss Maybelle. Miss Annie held the second place among the undergraduates, and Miss Maybelle was first in the third class. Mr. John Carey, who went on to witness his daughter's graduation, will bring Miss Estorah Stephens and his daughter, Msss Kate, home with him.

Wednesday evening Mr. and Mrs. Willis Reagan gave a delightful tea party. Not a large number were present, but the evening was spent most pleasantly. Those present were: Miss Marks, New Orleans; Miss Jackson, New Orleans; Miss Cliff Kiser, and Mr. Warren, New Orleans; Mr. C. T. Logan, Mr. Howell Glynn.

In Dalton, on Monday evening, at the residence of Professor Henry Schoeler, Miss Carrie Mathews was given a complimentary musicale. The programme was excellent and its rendition perfect. Miss Mathews was assisted by Mrs. Schoeler, Miss Harbin and others. Miss Mathews's playing was highly complimented by all present, and it well deserved; for she never played with finer effect.

Thursday afternoon, at the Kimball house, Miss Louise DeGive was married to Mr. Edward M. Horine, of Peoria, Ill., Rev. Father McCarthy officiating. The affair was very quiet, with no one present except the father and mother of the bride. Immediately after the wedding Mr. and Mrs. Horine left for Lookout mountain, where they will spend several weeks, after which they will return to Atlanta. On their return to the city, Mr. and Mrs. DeGive will tender them a reception.

Miss DeGive is well and favorably known in the city, and numbers her friends by the hundreds. Since her entrance into society she has been quite a favorite. Mr. Horine is a rising young business man of Peoria, and commands, alike, the respect and admiration of all. Peoria will be the future home of Mr. and Mrs. Horine.

The society of Pierce church gave an entertainment at the residence of Mrs. E. A. Hall, on Rawson street Tuesday evening. A large number of the members of the society and their friends were out. The following programme was rendered:

"Wounded"—Miss Abbie Bean.
"The Leak in the Dyke"—Miss May Withers.
"White Wings"—vocal solo—Miss Brewster.
"Minding the Baby"—Miss Flora Fain.
"The New Church Organ"—Miss Lena Hall.

The programme was well carried out and reflected much credit upon the society. The next meeting will be held at the residence of Mr. John Lively, on Hood street.

The North Side german club will give a german at New Holland about the 30th. The party will go out in the afternoon, spend the night at New Holland and return on the following day.

The engagement of Mr. Jos. L. Freedman, of the celebrated firm of Bernheim Bros. & Uri, of Paducat, Ky., and Miss Lizzie Keeler, of New York city, is announced. There will be no cards.

On Tuesday evening last, at the residence of Mr. J. A. Buchanan, 14 Edmonds street, aided by his faithful assistant, Miss Fannie O'Sheals, gave a delightful entertainment to their Sabbath-school class, which consists of forty-eight bright eyed little misses. Among them was Miss Gerty Powell, of Cartersville, who is on a visit to the city. The programme consisted of songs, duets, solos, recitations, etc., after which delicious ice cream and other delicacies were served. The chaperones were Mrs. J. A. Buchanan, Mrs. M. E. Howell, Mrs. N. J. Taylor, Miss Fannie O'Sheals, and Miss Mattie Ray.

The young ladies of Grace church gave an ice cream festival at the residence of Mr. J. C. Hendrix, on Jackson street, Tuesday evening. A large number attended and the evening was a most pleasant one.

Miss Adelene Adair entertained a number of friends Tuesday evening at her home on Washington street. The young folks gathered early and the evening passed quickly. At nine o'clock an elegant supper was served. The remainder of the evening was spent in pleasant conversation and delightful promenades. Several selections of music and one or two recitations were given to the delight of all. At tweve o'clock the company dispersed. The evening was one of great enjoyment to all, and it was with regret that "good-night" was said. The following young ladies were present: Miss Adelene Adair, Miss Laura Adair, Miss Nellie Inman, Miss Annie Raine, Miss Cornelia Jackson, Miss Sallie Fannie Grant, Miss Effie Howell, Miss Isma Dooly, Miss Annie Waddell, Miss Minnie Hillyer, Miss Laura Lee Grant, Miss Maud Clark, Miss Addie Maud, Miss Lollie Hammond, Miss Annie Adair, Miss Kathleen Jones, Miss Josie Clark. Among the young gentlemen present were: Messrs. Gordon Kiser, Albert Howell, Henry Inman, Vol Taliaferro, Robt. Maddox, Henry Gray, Walter Inman, Robert Riley, Howard Patillo, Dee McCarty, Pete Grant, Ed Peeples, Will Prescott, Croom Walker, Pryor Mynatt, and Isaac W. Lovejoy, Jr.

THROUGH THE STATE.

What the Society People Have Been and Contemplate Doing.

Athens.

The commencement season is at its height; the city is gay with visitors and pleasure-seekers from all parts of the state. The first affair of the season was the dance on Tuesday evening, given by Miss Bloomfield, in honor of her guests, Misses Brown and Wilcox. The evening concluded with a german, which was gracefully led by Mr. James Bloomfield, assisted by Mr. Henry Freeman, of Savannah.

On Wednesday evening the Oconee boat club complimented some of their lady friends. The party left the boat house at 7 o'clock, and after a three miles pull landed at the "Rock," where refreshments of various kinds were served. An hour of conversation in the moonlight, a few stray couples in the boats, and others in quiot spots of the river bank, was followed by a slow row back to the boat house. Here the picnicers were met by wagons and taken to their several homes. Very pretty souvenirs were presented to the ladies and bore the names of those composing the party as follows:

Tugalo; Mrs. H. C. White, Mr. W. Fleming, Miss Fannie Gordon, Mr. J. A. Benedict.
Undine; Miss Carrie Crane, Mr. H. K. Nicholson, Miss Maggie Morton, Mr. C. B. Griffeth.
Daphne; Miss Mamie Coates, Mr. E. A. Sanford, Miss Hattie Barrett, Mr. Charles Coates.

On Thursday evening the annual hop of the junior class complimentary to the senior class occurred at Deupree opera house. This was the most brilliant and successful junior hop ever given here. The german was conducted by Messrs. John W. Grant and P. H. Snook, of Atlanta. About sixty couples participated, and the figures were unusually pretty. The great number of graceful dancers was the occasion of remark from everybody. The German Fusilier band of Charleston made the most elegant music ever heard at balls in our city, and the management of various dances have every reason to congratulate themselves on securing the services of this band.

On Friday evening the annual reception to the senior class, given by Professor and Mrs. White at their home on Milledge avenue, was an occasion long to be remembered among the social events of the state. The ball room presented a scene of unparalleled loveliness, the parlors and refreshment rooms were thronged with distinguished people, names historic in Georgia and throughout the country were heard at every turn; the piazzas afforded a lovely opportunity to the promenader, and the spacious lawn was flecked with the sheeny white of the dresses of those who preferred its inviting coolness. The Athenaeum is open every day and its rooms are filled with the belles and beaux of the state, who spend the mornings in the dance or at billiards, or what most suits the fancy.

It is impossible to give a list of the visitors. Mrs. W. D. Grant, of Atlanta, is chaperoning a charming party of Atlanta ladies, who are just taking the town by storm. FINANCE AND COMMERCE

Bonds, Stocks and Money.

CONSTITUTION OFFICE,
ATLANTA, July 17, 1886.

A retrospective glance at financial matters shows wonderful and unexpected changes within three years past, the greatest of these being reductions in interest on permanent investments. Then it was the rule in the money centers where money is always abundant for investments considered first-class in character to net the holder from five to seven per cent, while in the south from seven up ten per cent was had. Now, however, our country over it is out of the question to buy anything well known and readily marketable at any moment paying better than four to five per cent, and many securities sell freely at a 3@3½ per cent rate. This applies mainly to state and city bonds. Government bonds command a premium which nets investors only 2¾ per cent, and, as the debt is being decreased constantly by bond calls, the price for the four per cents, which are not subject to call, will likely continue to advance. The surplus revenues of the government will, unless there is a material falling off through tariff reduction or business depression, in a few years pay off the debt, and then a revolution in our banking system will come about, and will either necessitate a re-establishment of the state system or the organization of a plan on the order of the bank of England, backed by the government. The latter is hardly probable, because it is not in harmony with our ideas of government.

Every indication of the present leads to the conclusion that the low rates of interest are permanent, and those who are accumulating money by saving will simply have to be content with the slower process of getting rich.

There is yet in all quarters a good demand for, and quick absorption of, sound securities, and appearances lead us to expect that condition to continue through the remainder of the summer.

Our local banks have all had an exceptionally prosperous period for the past year, as their statements testify, and stockholders are receiving gratifying dividends as the result.

Without particularizing, all popular home securities are scarce and in unabated demand.

Money easy.

NEW YORK STOCKS.

Stocks as Reported at the New York Stock Exchange.

NEW YORK, July 17.—Today was the dullest day on the stock exchange for many months. Many brokers were out of town, and the only thing attracting attention were the Western Union and Erie, which were bought by some party who predict higher prices for these stocks. Opening prices were generally ⅛ lower than last evening's closing prices, and after a tame and featureless opening succeeded a tame and featureless day. Prices show irregular, but in no case more than fractional changes. Pacific Mail, Western Union and Erie show advances. Sales 91,000 shares.

NEW YORK, July 17—C. L. Green & Co., in their report on cotton futures today, say: It has been a very light day, and a sort of Saturday deal throughout. Liverpool was disappointing, and led to some spilling of long contracts with a decline of 4@5 points, after which covering to end up the week restored most of the decline. At best, however there was not much feature to the position, except indications of quiet buying of August by heretofore bearish operators.

THE CHICAGO MARKET.

Features of the Speculative Movement in Grain and Produce.

Special to The Constitution.

CHICAGO, July 17—For a change prices took a little up turn today, though for an hour or so after the opening it was a question which way prices would go. In corn there was nothing to be heard except bullish news. A large number of telegrams were received from St. Louis and Kansas City, and given as wide circulation as possible, all agreeing that the real situation was worse even than had been reported. Talk of this kind advanced September option to 40½c, notwithstanding heavy receipts of 446 cars. Manipulation was quite a factor in wheat today, and prices responded by a little advance. Floor talk is that even before the opening Armour had brokers talking the market down, and as early as they could legitimately do so, selling it off. August opened at 78c, which was a decline of a good ½c. During this period another set of brokers were quietly buying. The market kept inside of 78c all day and closed firm. Nearly all the local houses on the market to any extent were on the buying side.

Hog products, particularly pork, suffered from an over supply of stop orders, and early in the day broke about 20c, but later recovered over half it, and closed steady.

DRUNKENNESS
Or the Liquor Habit, Positively Cured by Administering Dr. Haines' Golden Specific.

It can be given in a cup of coffee or tea without the knowledge of the person taking it, is absolutely harmless, and will effect a permanent and speedy cure, whether the patient is a moderate drinker or an alcoholic wreck. It has been given in thousands of cases, and in every instance a perfect cure has followed. It never fails. The system once impregnated with the Specific, it becomes an utter impossibility for the liquor appetite to exist.

BILL ARP'S LETTER.

IN WHICH HE GIVES THE FARMERS SOME GOOD ADVICE.

The Value of a Pea Vine Crop—How to Sow Them and How to Cure the Vines—A House Full of Children—The Prohibition Question—Other Remarks From the Philosopher.

Sow peas now. It is not too late for a forage crop. I am not much of a farmer, but I do know the value of a pea vine crop. It makes the best forage in the world and the most of it. I don't sow for the peas, but for the vines, and I mow them while the peas are in the dough. The leaves will not fall off then and they are easily cured. It takes three or four days to cure them, but rain will not hurt them if they are forked over to dry again. I have had it to rain on them every day for three days after cutting and thought they would certainly mildew and spoil, but they did not. A man can mow down two acres in a day with a common scythe, and it is the sweetest work in the world. When they are put away in the barn take notice and see if they are moulding and if so then fork over and toss them to the other side. Air is all they want. The milch cows like them better than any other food, and they make the milk rich and creamy. Let the farmers sow an acre if no more. Sow on the stubble land and it will keep the land rich and mellow. The best upland corn I have seen is where I had peas last year and mowed them. Some folks think they must be turned under to enrich the land, but that is a mistake. It is the shade they give to the land that enriches it. Shade produces ammonia. I don't believe in turning under a green crop of any kind. Better let the grass and weeds decay on top and then turn under. Where I sow peas on galded spots for fertilizing I do not cut them, but let them die on the land. It will not pay to harvest them on such spots. But on good land the vines will sprout again after mowing, and will cover the ground in a few days, and make more shade, which is more ammonia, which is more corn or wheat or cotton. Farmers, sow peas. I have four acres up now on my oat stubble, and they have almost hid the ground. I turned the stubble with an Oliver chill one-horse plow. Then harrowed in the peas with a roller disc harrow; then rolled with a home made roller, which last is the best implement on a farm except the plough. Any farmer can make one. Make in two sections, each three feet long, and as near three feet in diameter as you can get. Poplar is the best timber. Bore through with a two inch augur; that is, bore half way from each end, and if a man has a good eye he can hit the hole. If he misses it a little, the iron spindle will burn its way through. Let the spindle be only one and a half inches in diameter, and project four inches. Put a washer between the rollers. Build a frame round, and let the end of the spindle support it. Bolt the corners of the frame together. Bolt two upright standards at each end for a plank seat to rest upon, and fasten the seat securely to the cross pieces. Then bolt and brace a good tongue to the front of the frame, and use your wagon doubletree. Then get aboard and pop your whip and ride. It is splendid riding. Carl does all my rolling, and Jessie rides with him sometimes. A roller beats any harrow in the world for pulverizing. In fact, I have never seen a harrow that would pulverize much. This spring my land broke up very cloddy, but I planted corn and covered it with the clods and then rolled it, and it was as smooth as a parlor floor, and every hill came up. I sowed my turnip seed Saturday, and rolled them in, and they came up before breakfast Monday morning. Roll your wheat. Roll your clover seed. Roll everything you can. As Byron says, "Roll on." The weather is all right now, and we are breaking the middles out of the corn. The corn is in the silk and is big and strong, and I thought it was laid by, but the middles look so bad I thought it best to "bust em." It is the first good corn I ever saw that never had any plowing but a "run round." We have to plow very shallow now to keep above the roots. The children's crops are doing fine—the watermelons and goobbers and popcorn. These children are getting uppity and bigety and monopolize my attention and keep Mrs. Arp busy. She is making some homespun bathing suits for them now. There are six little boys out here, and some girls, and they have to bathe every evening. Its grandma, grandma, all the day long, and they levied on me to build the dam higher so that the water would be deep enough for them to jump off the spring board. They call it a wash hole, and are learning to swim. I worked hard and raised the dam, and as I was going to the house to rest I heard a little rascal say: "He's a mighty good old man, ain't he." But I get even with them; I make them work before I let them play. I made them pull every blade of grass out of the sweet potato vines, for neither the plow nor the hoe would get it all. They work very well at the start but soon they begin to grunt and talk about how hot the sun is, and they want to go to the spring every little while. They are good quarter nags, but haven't got bottom for a four mile heat. They like to work with me when I do the most of it. It is their vacation, and a boy's idea of vacation is unalloyed, undisturbed, uninterrupted frolic and felicity. It is a mixture of fishing in the branch and baseball in the meadow and marbles in the front yard and breaking the bull calf and going in a washing in the afternoon and something to eat most every time of day. There are no evening naps now to do any good, for its "vence your roundance and lose groundance and fat and stick and fat and go last and dubs and man in and kicks and ringance and you fudged, you fudged, it's my go," and I don't know what all. Might as well try to sleep in a lunatic asylum. At night they sleep on a pallet in the parlor and scratch and kick round and roll over and are all over the floor by morning. I'd rather raise four girls than two boys, except during a war, but I feel more concern about the girls after they are grown. They get so lonesome in the country and want to go to Atlanta. But they are very busy now, for I am crowding them with blackberries—splendid berries—and they are making wine and acid and jam and jelly. The boys pick about a peck a day, and could pick a bushel if we wanted them. It takes most as many jugs and bottles as the Atlanta prohibitionists used on the last wet day. Is Atlanta dry yet? Sam Jones says he tried to find out when he came through, and the way the people talked reminded him of a feller he saw one night hugging a lamp post, and the feller said: "Mister, could you told me which are the opposite side of this street?" "Why, of course, my friend; that side over yonder is the opposite side." "Why, I was over there just now, said he, and a feller told me this were the opposite side." Sam says the Atlanta people talk sorter forked and quote Scripture like the old nigger preacher who said: "He that is not for us, aint agin us thank the Lord." But I think the antics out to tote fair and give the law a fair trial tor two years. If it is a bad law time will tell and then it can be repealed, or amended. Folks have been trying for fifty years to settle this liquor question but it won't stay settled. I understand we are to have a candidate for the legislature who will run on a repeal of the law in this county. I don't think he can be elected. Our people are satisfied with the prohibition. Those who are obliged to have liquor can get it at Rome. Rome is very wet. But our crops are so poor this year we can't afford to buy whisky and coffee too and so we will go it on coffee for the sake of the women. I'm sorry for the solicitor-general and the lawyers for they get no criminal practice in our county now. But our taxes will be reduced and that will help everybody. So let the law stand awhile longer. BILL ARP.

SOROFULA

Humors, Erysipelas, Canker, and Catarrh, Can be cured by purifying the blood with

I do not believe that Ayer's Sarsaparilla has an equal as a remedy for Scrofulous Humors. It is pleasant to take, gives strength and vigor to the body, and produces a more permanent, lasting, result than any medicine I ever used.—E. Haines, No. Lindale, O.

I have used Ayer's Sarsaparilla, in my family, for Scrofula, and know it is taken faithfully, it will thoroughly eradicate this terrible disease.—W. F. Fowler, M. D., Greenville, Tenn.

For forty years I have suffered with Erysipelas. I have tried all sorts of remedies for my complaint, but found no relief until I commenced using Ayer's Sarsaparilla. After taking ten bottles of this medicine I am completely cured.—Mary C. Amesbury, Rockport, Me.

I have suffered, for years, from Catarrh, which was so severe that it destroyed my appetite and weakened my system. After trying other remedies, and getting no relief, I began to take Ayer's Sarsaparilla, and, in a few months, was cured.—Susan L. Cook, 909 Albany st., Boston Highlands, Mass.

Ayer's Sarsaparilla is superior to any blood purifier that I have ever tried. I have taken it for Scrofula, Canker, and Salt-Rheum, and received much benefit from it. It is good, also, for a weak stomach.—Millie Jane Peirce, South Bradford, Mass.

TALK IS CHEAP!

So it is, in the majority of instances, but it is expensive to us in this space. Still, our friends must always have a pleasant word, and nothing pleases more than surprises. We have made it rule to "bull" the market on surprises by offering just such goods, just such prices and just such bargains as no one else in the country can duplicate. It has gotten to be the common remark among our friends, that "Dougherty & Co., beat the world giving good goods at low prices." And certainly there must be something in this, or we would not be selling such enormous quantities of goods. But, are we selling them! Well, don't take our word for it. Come in tomorrow and see for yourselves. Last week we were completely crowded. The truth is, people are not going to buy now unless they get good prices and real, genuine bargains. But come to see us, and we will convince you of the integrity of our word.
